This unit was written using the Curriculum Unit Planner, 1999-2002, which was developed in the province of Ontario by the Ministry of Education. The Planner provides electronic templates and resources to develop and share units to help implement the Ontario curriculum. This unit reflects the views of the developers of the unit and is not necessarily those of the Ministry of Education. Permission is given to reproduce this unit for any non-profit educational purpose. Teachers are encouraged to copy, edit, and adapt this unit for educational purposes. Any reference in this unit to particular commercial resources, learning materials, equipment, or technology does not reflect any official endorsements by the Ministry of Education, school boards, or associations that supported the production of this unit.

Unit Context

The subtasks outlined are designed to build skills and concepts that students demonstrate in the culminating task. Students develop a theme magazine based on a novel of their choice. The aim is for students to develop skills in reasoning, communication, organization, and the application of language conventions.

The unit suggests links to other subject areas; however, these suggestions are by no means comprehensive. For instance, the teacher may wish to make links to expectations in The Ontario Curriculum, The Arts document for Grade 7, since students create a comic strip and promotional advertisements about their novels.

Unit Summary

Students engage in a variety of activities including: examining the components and structures of a magazine; writing a feature article related to the theme of the novel; writing a biography; creating persuasive advertising; practising research and interview skills; managing data; writing a letter to the editor; and developing a comic strip.

Culminating Task Assessment

Students demonstrate their learning by presenting their magazines in a Magazine Media Launch. This activity involves an oral presentation by students about their magazines. The oral presentation is the culminating task, and the magazine is a portfolio of the students' learning throughout the unit.

Links to Prior Knowledge

Students should know how to identify and write a piece of persuasive writing. To be successful in Subtask 8, students should have completed the Data Management strand in Mathematics before beginning this unit.

Considerations

TECHNOLOGY- Internet usage could be incorporated to assist students in completing tasks. (It is recommended that students have access to computers to complete the culminating task.) Teachers must ensure board policies about Internet use are followed.

LIBRARY / INFORMATION CENTRE - Ensure that the library has a number of appropriate resources, e.g., novels, magazines, biographical information, and research materials available for students.

Notes to Teacher

This Elementary Curriculum Unit has been written by a team of teachers for use by other teachers. It represents the approach they took to help students achieve the knowledge and skills described in the curriculum expectations. It is expected that teachers delivering the unit will use their professional judgment in tailoring the teaching/learning to meet the needs and interests of their students and their communities. Teachers may choose to use all or part of the unit, use additional or different resources, develop additional subtasks, and/or use these units as a stimulus to develop their own units.

The times provided by the writers for the unit and each subtask are only approximations. Teachers should adjust the task times in consideration of the needs and interests of their students and the organization of program in their school.

Each unit subtask contains strategies for teaching/learning and assessment, as well as assessment recording devices. Teachers may wish to adjust strategies based on their particular situations. Where strategies are changed, corresponding changes must be made to assessment recording devices.

Magazine Mania

Language An Integrated Unit for Grade 7

Some activities may require written communication with parents and guardians to provide information, receive permission or request assistance. Teachers must follow school and board policies and procedures when communicating with parents and guardians.

To ensure that the deadlines for the various components of the magazine are met, the teacher and students should use tracking sheets. Students should be given time in class to work on the various subtasks, but should also work at home. Allow time for students to self-edit, peer-edit, and to participate in teacher conferences before the completion of any subtask.

The teacher may wish to incorporate a free-choice component in which students select a variety of activities that enhance the final, published magazine. Free-choice activities may involve: contest ideas, write-to-us sections, possible pullout poster sections, horoscopes, movie reviews, questionnaires, want ads, sale sections, fashion, short stories, poetry, recipes, careers, fitness and nutrition, sports, and art reviews. If used, these activities should complement the magazine content.

A great deal of the writing is dependent on the reading of the novel. The teacher should assign a minimum of 20 minutes daily for students to read their books silently. Students are to read at home as well. The teacher provides four to six titles from which students select.

The number of novels required for this unit is based on the availability of novels within the classroom/school. The Suggested Book Titles for Book Talk (BLM 2.0) contains a list of age-appropriate novels including some written by Canadian authors.

In conducting surveys, students must be instructed to accept "no comment" as a valid answer to any questions, and to respect that people may choose not to respond at all.

The URLs for the websites were verified by the writers prior to publication. Given the frequency with which these designations change, teachers should always verify the websites prior to assigning them for student use.

Teachers need to consult their board policies regarding use of any copyrighted materials. Before reproducing materials for student use from printed publications, teachers need to ensure that their board has a Cancopy licence and that this licence covers the resources they wish to use. Before screening videos/films with their students, teachers need to ensure that their board/school has obtained the appropriate public performance videocassette licence from an authorized distributor. Teachers are reminded that much of the material on the Internet is protected by copyright. Copyright is usually owned by the person or organization that created the work. Reproduction of any work or substantial part of any work on the Internet is not allowed without the permission of the owner.

Adaptations

Adaptations include adjustments for exceptional pupils, students with special education needs, and/or ESL/ELD students. Teachers should consult students' Individual Educational Plans (IEP) for specific directions on required accommodations and/or modifications. Use the Teacher Companion (see Ontario Curriculum Unit Planner) to browse, copy, or bookmark Special Education and ESL/ELD strategies.

Magazine Mania
Language An Integrated Unit for Grade 7

1 The Launch of Magazine Mania

Students discuss the features of a variety of magazines. They develop an understanding of different themes of magazines (survival, growing-up, fantasy, etc.). A piece of persuasive writing is chosen from a magazine and discussed in pairs and then with the whole class. Through the use of a graphic organizer, students demonstrate new and prior knowledge about persuasive writing.

2 Teacher-Directed Book Talk

Students are introduced to the culminating task. By the end of the subtask, students have selected two novels of interest. The final novel selection is used as the basis for the publication and presentation of the Magazine Media Launch.

3 Magazine Analysis

To build a framework for understanding different components in a magazine, students investigate and build a list based on components they find in the sample magazines. This includes the following elements: the covers; feature articles; photographs; promotional gimmicks; profile segments; tables of contents; special advertising sections; contest ideas; advice columns; persuasive movie/book promotions; letters to the editor; comic strips; surveys/questionnaires; graphic design; and lettering. The teacher instructs students to begin reading.

4 Feature Article

Students explain the themes of their novels, supporting their interpretations with evidence from the novels and their own knowledge and experiences. Once students have distinguished between regular and feature articles, they write a feature article that is directly related to the themes of their novels.

5 Biography

Students research the author of their novel and write a biographical essay. The activity involves teacher presentation, modelling, and student in-class writing.

6 Persuasive Advertising

Using pre-selected advertisements, the teacher directs discussion about the purpose of advertising and the techniques used to convince the consumer to purchase a specific product.

7 The Interview

Interviews are an integral part of a magazine layout, often featuring a prominent individual. Students view and discuss interview skills with particular reference given to questioning techniques. The teacher demonstrates the written format of a magazine interview. Following the lesson, students select a main character, a minor character, or the author of the novel as the person to interview. The interview appears in the student's magazine.

8 Statistically Speaking

Students apply the skills they have developed in the Data Management strand of Mathematics. They examine the themes of their novels and decide on a topic that enables them to create, administer, collect, organize, and analyse data. Students assess the data and form conclusions based on the data. The results are presented in graph/table/chart format, and the final data analysis is in written format.

9 Letter to the Editor

Students read, analyse, and create a letter to the editor based on a topic related to their novels. They gain experience developing arguments to convince others, finding and stating facts to support their views or opinions, and directing their writing to specific audiences.

Magazine Mania

Language An Integrated Unit for Grade 7

10 The Comic Relief

Students individually select an aspect of their novel that is easily adapted to a comic strip. Students may choose to retell the novel, highlight a specific chapter or particular scene, or emphasise the theme of the novel.

11 Pulling It All Together!

The purpose of this subtask is for students to produce a creative cover page, a table of contents, and to assemble their magazines.

12 Magazine Media Launch

Students demonstrate their learning by presenting their magazines in a Magazine Media Launch. This activity involves an oral presentation by students about their magazines. The oral presentation is the culminating task, and the magazine is a portfolio of the students' learning throughout the unit.

Assessment

The assessment tool for this particular subtask is based on the completion of BLM 1.1, Persuasive Article Graphic Organizer. The assessment reveals how well students justify why the article they've selected is a persuasive article.

Anecdotal Record

Teaching / Learning

Activity 1:

1. Before the lesson, the teacher selects and displays a variety of magazines. The teacher should have at least one magazine for each pair of students.
2. The teacher allows students time to peruse the magazines in pairs and explain why they think the magazines would be of interest to the adolescent reader.
3. Once the pairs have shared their thoughts, the teacher has a class discussion on the findings, e.g., colour and graphic design, age appropriateness, stereotyping, number of advertisements versus number of written articles, whether they are informative, etc. The teacher then records findings onto chart paper.

Activity 2:

1. Students in small groups brainstorm to find the different themes evident in the magazines examined in Activity 1.
2. Students share their findings with the class, while the teacher records the themes on chart paper so that there is a record of the discussion. Students may refer to the list as the unit progresses.

Magazine Mania

Language An Integrated Unit for Grade 7

~ 80 mins

Activity 3 (Review of Persuasive Article):

1. The teacher selects a persuasive magazine article to use as a model for students to examine. The article could be placed on overhead sheets for students to read and examine. Using the sample, the teacher leads a review discussion about the characteristics of the persuasive article.

Activity 4:

1. Students read through the magazines and record the titles of the persuasive articles located in the magazine.
2. In a think-pair-share, students share their findings and justify why they think the article is persuasive.
3. Individual students volunteer to share with the class why they think their article is persuasive.
4. Students pick a different article that is persuasive. Using BLM 1.1, they support in writing their reasons for why the article is considered persuasive.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

The teacher may pre-select persuasive articles for students who require assistance in selecting such articles. This then helps the process and gets them on the task of justifying why it is persuasive. Refer to BLM 1.1 for the criteria of a persuasive piece of writing.

Notes to Teacher

The teacher should provide a variety of magazines that demonstrate a comprehensive set of themes that would differ from those of students' day-to-day experiences. A diverse selection of magazines should be offered, reflecting ethnicity, race, culture, etc. at various readability levels. The teacher must keep a list of themes discussed, which is to be used in Subtask 4 to generate a list of novel themes. Before beginning this subtask, the teacher should select a persuasive article to use as a model for reviewing persuasive writing with students.

Teaching / LearningIntroduction to the Culminating Task:

The teacher explains the culminating task using the overhead, Magazine Mania (BLM 2.1). Students receive copies of the culminating task and Unit Tracking Sheet (BLM 2.2), which they attach to the inside of their folders. These folders are considered magazine portfolios. The tracking sheet assists in organizing the final task. The folder/portfolio is an additional organization tool that contains all student work related to the culminating task.

Book Talk:

Part A:

1. The teacher provides a brief "book talk" for each of the four to six pre-selected novels. Suggested Book Titles for Book Talk (BLM 2.0), contains a list of age-appropriate novels and their reading levels. (See Notes to Teacher.)
2. Students listen to the book talks and then browse through the books that are available.
3. Students then select two of the pre-selected novels to read. This should be done by the end of the day so that the teacher can prepare for the next class.

Part B:

The teacher examines each of the students' choices and decides which of the two novels best suits their reading levels. Students understand that the teacher's decision is based on their individual reading levels. The teacher provides students with one or two choices, or consults with individual students about other options, if students choose novels that are both too difficult or too easy.

Students should keep all the materials produced for subtasks in file folders or portfolios. Students present the rough draft of their magazines in conference with the teacher, as part of the Culminating Task.

Book talks could also be done by invited guests, e.g., librarians, fellow teachers, parents, principals, or community members who are familiar with the selected novels.

A great deal of the writing is dependent on the reading of the self-selected novel. The teacher may assign 20 minutes daily for students to read their books silently. Students are to read at home as well.

Activity 1 (Think/Pair/Share):

1. Students think on their own and record in their magazine portfolios what they know of the various components of magazines.
2. Students share their thoughts and continue to brainstorm with a partner.
3. Students share their ideas with the whole class.
4. The teacher records the students' input on chart paper for future reference.

Activity 2 (Teacher Directed):

1. Using a variety of magazines as samples, the teacher focuses on the following: covers, lettering and graphic design, feature articles, photographs, regular articles, volumes, dates, prices, titles, promotional gimmicks, profile segments, tables of contents, special advertising sections, advertisements, contest ideas, advice columns, persuasive movie/book promotions, letters to the editor, comic strips, timelines, captions, sidebars, subheadings, bulleted lists, illustrations, and surveys/questionnaires.

2. The class discusses the many aspects of a magazine including those that are not necessary in the Culminating Task. Students may want to use some of these as suggestions for their freelance components as mentioned in the Notes to Teacher in the Unit Overview.

Suggestions:

The teacher can put samples on an overhead.

The teacher can physically take apart a magazine and mount it onto Bristol board. Throughout the class discussion, various components could be labelled.

Activity 3 (Scavenger Hunt):

Students work independently to complete BLM 3.1.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

To accommodate students who are experiencing difficulty with the activity, the teacher may reduce the number of components. To ensure understanding, the teacher may work with students to identify these text features in other articles. For example, the teacher can find a sample article and use arrowed captions or sticky notes to identify the various features.

Assessment

Before students submit their final feature articles, they progress through a series of other conferences: self, peer and teacher. At each conference, editors complete a Conference Sheet (BLM 4.2). Activity 1 (Teacher Directed):

1. The teacher selects a novel that was previously read to the class.
2. Through discussion, students discover the theme of that novel. The teacher then asks students to find evidence from the novel that supports the theme.
3. The teacher demonstrates for students how to write a feature article (see BLM 4.3, Feature Article Sample Based on The Pig Man by Paul Zindel). Use the graphic organizer (in BLM 4.1) to guide students through the process.

Activity 2 (Student Task):

1. The teacher reviews the assessment criteria using the Feature Article Writing Rubric prior to students beginning this task.
2. Students write a feature article that supports the theme of the novel, using evidence, examples and details from the novel to validate their opinions.
3. Students draw a conclusion based on the evidence, examples, and details of the novel.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

For some exceptional students, the teacher may require the Feature Article assignment to be completed using the graphic organizer. Exceptional students will also move through the conferences; however, some students may require assistance in self-editing activities and the final submission.

1. In small groups, students create a series of headings that assist them in developing a biographical piece of writing.
2. As a large group, students share their headings.
3. A list of headings should be recorded. This may be done by the teacher in a large group format or individually by students.
4. Such information should be placed in the magazine portfolios that were distributed during Subtask 2. The graphic organizer in BLM 5.0 is included to assist students in collecting information.

Suggested Headings: Background Information, Position, Achievements, Effects of Achievements

Activity 3:

1. Students begin researching the author of their self-selected novels. The focus of the research is based on the list of headings generated by the class during Activity 2.
2. Once students have completed their research, they follow the writing process to each create a one-page biographical essay on the authors of their novels.
3. Before students write their biographical essays, the teacher conducts a mini-lesson on bibliographic form and reviews the assessment criteria using the Biography Rubric.
4. At the bottom of the page, students reference sources accurately using the format in BLM 5.1, How to Write a Bibliography.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

Exceptional learners who are experiencing difficulty may work with a partner in the research component. Any accommodations made for written components should reflect the students' IEPs. Students may require assistance in the research and writing components of the final biography.

Notes to Teacher

The teacher may allow students to work in pairs/small groups to create the biography for a given author. This would reduce the amount of work for students, assuming that the students are reading novels by the same author. The teacher could also assess group skills using this approach.

In conjunction with the activities in this subtask, the teacher may want to include previously taught technology skills. Students may cut and paste an illustration of the author, write the final bibliographical in newspaper format using appropriate software, produce a computer-generated advertisement promoting the author's written works.

BLM 5.1 How to Write a Bibliography is included for teacher and student reference.

Activity 1:

Prior to the activity the teacher clips a variety of advertisements from magazines directed at teens, e.g., healthy eating, smoking, substance abuse, etc.

- 1 The teacher holds a class discussion about the appeal of the advertisement. A successful ad grabs your attention and then persuades you to buy.
2. The teacher brainstorms with students about where ads might be seen.

The teacher and students examine the list of Advertising Tricks (BLM 6.1) used in order to persuade the consumer to purchase a product.

Activity 3:

Students create an advertisement that is directly related to the theme of their novel, using BLM 6.2 as a guide. The advertisement should address one of the following: product (clothing as worn by characters in the novel); a service (a service from the novel); or an idea (as seen in the novel).

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

Exceptional students may require assistance to develop a persuasive advertisement. The teacher could provide a topic to simplify the task.

Description

Interviews are an integral part of a magazine layout, often featuring a prominent individual. Students view and discuss interview skills with particular reference given to questioning techniques. The teacher demonstrates the written format of a magazine interview. Following the lesson, students select a main character, a minor character, or the author of the novel as the person to interview. The interview appears in the student's magazine.

Expectations

- 7e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to outline an argument, to report on observations) and to specific audiences, using forms appropriate for their purpose and topic (e.g., write a lab report for an audience familiar with the scientific terminology);
- 7e7 • revise and edit their work, focusing on content and elements of style (e.g., diction), independently and in collaboration with others;
- 7e8 A • proofread and correct their final drafts, focusing on grammar, punctuation, spelling, and conventions of style;
- 7e14 – use a variety of sentence types (statements, exclamations, questions, commands) appropriately and effectively;
- 7e70 A – create a variety of media works (e.g., a class newspaper, a story board, a radio documentary).
- 7e3 A • organize information to develop a central idea, using well-linked and well-developed paragraphs;
- 7e33 A – identify the main ideas in information materials, and explain how the details support the main ideas;

Assessment

A conference is held with students as they prepare questions relevant to their novels. The conference may be formal or informal. The role of the teacher is to provide immediate feedback to students and to assist in the formation of questions. The teacher may suggest types of questions that students have overlooked or not considered. The length of each conference varies. The teacher records observations in an anecdotal format based on students' responses.

Activity 1:

1. Students watch a videotape of a variety of interviews. (See Notes to Teacher for suggestions.)
2. Following the viewing of the interviews, students work in pairs to brainstorm the components of a successful interview, with specific emphasis on the questioning techniques used by the interviewer.
3. As a large group, the class discusses the students' findings and records them onto chart paper.

Magazine ManiaLanguage An Integrated Unit for Grade 7*~ 240 mins

4. From the chart paper, students decide on three to five critical qualities that a successful interviewer must have. The teacher should remind students that the current focus is on the types of questions and follow-up questions that the interviewer uses.

Activity 2:

1. Using a novel that has been read to students, the teacher creates a model of a written interview with students (shared writing). BLM 7.0 provides a sample of a written interview.
2. The teacher reviews the assessment criteria with the class, using the Interview Rubric.
3. Students each select a person (main or secondary character or the author of the novel) to be interviewed in their writing assignment.
4. Based on what has taken place throughout the novel, students begin devising questions that directly reflect the novel.
5. In addition to preparing the questions, students demonstrate their understanding of the novel through their responses. If several students have selected the same novel, they are encouraged to work together to discuss possible questions and responses.
6. Students write their interview questions and responses based on the information from the novel and/or the biographical research completed in Subtask 5.
7. The written interview is published in the student's magazine.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

Notes to Teacher

The teacher pre-records a videotape that demonstrates a variety of interviews. When selecting interviews, the teacher must be sensitive to the diverse backgrounds of Grade 7 students in the class.

The teacher should ask students to view a variety of interviews, e.g., an entertaining interview, a documentary, a sports/political interview. In some areas, a radio interview is a suitable substitute.

Teacher Reflections

Outline potential changes/improvements you would make to the subtask, or raise questions/concerns for future thought.

Description

Students apply the skills they have developed in the Data Management strand of Mathematics. They examine the themes of their novels and decide on a topic that enables them to create, administer, collect, organize, and analyse data. Students assess the data and form conclusions based on the data. The results are presented in graph/table/chart format, and the final data analysis is in written format.

Expectations

- 7m70 • collect and organize categorical, discrete, or continuous primary data and secondary data and display the data using charts and graphs, including relative frequency tables and circle graphs;
- 7e5 A • produce pieces of writing using a variety of forms (e.g., descriptive, narrative, and expository compositions), techniques and resources appropriate to the form and purpose, and materials from other media (e.g., diagrams, illustrations);
- 7e14 A – use a variety of sentence types (statements, exclamations, questions, commands) appropriately and effectively;
- 7e24 – use spreadsheets appropriately to convey specific types of information (e.g., data).
- 7e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to outline an argument, to report on observations) and to specific audiences, using forms appropriate for their purpose and topic (e.g., write a lab report for an audience familiar with the scientific terminology);
- 7m73 – collect data by conducting a survey or an experiment to do with themselves, their environment, issues in their school or community, or content from another subject and record observations or measurements;

Assessment

The anecdotal records are based on the teacher's observations and conferencing with students. The teacher keeps the anecdotal records to monitor and record the progress students are demonstrating in this subtask. If the teacher wants to assess the mathematical component, an additional mathematical assessment tool should be created and presented to students before assigning the subtask.

Activity 1 (Review):

1. The teacher reviews with the whole group the purpose/function of a statistical survey and the relevance of the information derived from that survey. The teacher records the findings onto chart paper.
2. The teacher reviews with students the method in which statistical surveys are displayed in a magazine. BLM 8.1, Format for a Statistical Survey is provided to serve as a guideline for this portion of the review. Mini lessons may be required for all or some of these skills.

Activity 2 (Student Task):

1. Students examine the themes of their novels and decide on topics of interest, which they use to create and administer questions and collect, organize, and analyse data of their survey.
2. Students assess data and draw conclusions from the analysis of data.

Magazine ManiaLanguage An Integrated Unit for Grade 7*~ 200 mins

3. A blank copy of the survey and the results should be included in the culminating task. The teacher assesses the statistical survey using a rubric. Review assessment criteria with students before they begin the statistical survey portion of the subtask.
4. Students must be counselled to accept a "no comment" response.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

If students are reading the same novel, they can work in pairs to create a survey. In addition, the teacher may give students additional time in the Mathematics class to complete this subtask. Students can use software to produce the final graphs, charts, and/or tables to accompany their conclusions.

Notes to Teacher

This subtask assumes that students are familiar with Data Management. However, if students require a detailed review, the teacher may demonstrate the process using a novel that has been read to the class or by the class. This demonstration helps students understand the process. The intent is for students to demonstrate the transference of knowledge from Mathematics to Language Arts. In addition, students demonstrate their understanding of the theme of the novel based on the types of questions asked in the survey. If students are reading the same novel, they can work in pairs to produce the survey.

The teacher should provide time for students to write and administer the survey, tabulate the data, and produce a written report. The process takes approximately 150 minutes. Students can use software to generate graphs, charts, and/or tables to produce the conclusions of the data.

Teacher Reflections

Outline potential changes/improvements you would make to the subtask, or raise questions/concerns for future thought.

Record decisions you wish to pass on in the Subtask Notes; contents of this field are not passed along in the published unit.

Description

Students read, analyse, and create a letter to the editor based on a topic related to their novels. They gain experience developing arguments to convince others, finding and stating facts to support their views or opinions, and directing their writing to specific audiences.

Expectations

- 7e1 • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to outline an argument, to report on observations) and to specific audiences, using forms appropriate for their purpose and topic (e.g., write a lab report for an audience familiar with the scientific terminology);
- 7e3 A • organize information to develop a central idea, using well-linked and well-developed paragraphs;
- 7e4 • use a variety of sentence types and sentence structures, and sentences of varying length;
- 7e5 A • produce pieces of writing using a variety of forms (e.g., descriptive, narrative, and expository compositions), techniques and resources appropriate to the form and purpose, and materials from other media (e.g., diagrams, illustrations);
- 7e17 – spell a wide range of commonly used words correctly;
- 7e16 A – use parentheses appropriately (e.g., Gina (the one wearing the hat in the picture) is my friend's sister);
- 7e28 A • explain their interpretation of a written work, supporting it with evidence from the work and from their own knowledge and experience;

Description

Students individually select an aspect of their novel that is easily adapted to a comic strip. Students may choose to retell the novel, highlight a specific chapter or particular scene, or emphasise the theme of the novel.

Expectations

- 7a46 A – produce two- and three-dimensional works of art (i.e., works involving media and techniques used in drawing, painting, sculpting, printmaking) that communicate a range of thoughts, feelings, and experiences for specific purposes and to specific audiences (e.g., create a mask from “found” materials to celebrate the coming of spring);
- 7e55 A • create a variety of media works;
- 7e9 A • use and spell correctly the vocabulary appropriate for this grade level;
- 7a36 A • identify the principles of design (emphasis, rhythm, balance, unity, variety, proportion), and use them in ways appropriate for this grade when producing and responding to works of art;
- 7e21 A – show a growing awareness of the expressiveness of words in their word choice;

Activity 1:

Prior to this lesson, the teacher clips a number of comics from a variety of sources.

1. In small groups, students analyse the comics and brainstorm the essential components. These components are listed on chart paper.

Activity 2:

1. The teacher presents and discusses with the class a series of comic strips copied onto overheads.
2. The teacher may provide examples of comic strips that contain the problem-solution format and discuss their organization and features. Point out to students that a comic strip, like other narratives, is made up of a beginning, middle, and end, and that the main character often has a problem that requires a solution.
3. Students practise drawing the characters and experiment with sentences and phrases to be used in dialogue balloons.

Activity 3:

1. Students select an aspect of their novel that is easily adapted to comic-strip format.
2. Students may choose to retell part of the novel, highlight a specific chapter or particular scene, and/or emphasise the theme of the novel.
3. The teacher assesses the comic strip using the Comic Strip rubric. Review the assessment criteria before students begin the task.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

If students have difficulty coming up with a problem to start off the comic strip, the teacher may suggest that they refer back to the theme of their novel.

Notes to Teacher

The teacher should give students ample time to complete the cover page and table of contents. The teachers may want to integrate this subtask into Art class. This subtask asks students to pull together all written work from prior subtasks to create their completed versions of the magazine. Students can use their tracking sheets to ensure they have completed the necessary subtasks.

Description

Students demonstrate their learning by presenting their magazines in a Magazine Media Launch. This activity involves an oral presentation by students about their magazines. The oral presentation is the culminating task, and the magazine is a portfolio of the students' learning throughout the unit.

Expectations

- 7e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to outline an argument, to report on observations) and to specific audiences, using forms appropriate for their purpose and topic (e.g., write a lab report for an audience familiar with the scientific terminology);
- 7e7 • revise and edit their work, focusing on content and elements of style (e.g., diction), independently and in collaboration with others;
- 7e6 A • produce media texts using writing and materials from other media (e.g., a poster inviting members of the community to a school play; a multi-media presentation on an assigned topic);
- 7e10 • use correctly the conventions (spelling, grammar, punctuation, etc.) specified for this grade level (see below).
- 7e44 – use the special terminology in a particular area of study, as necessary;
- 7e52 • demonstrate the ability to concentrate by identifying main points and staying on topic;
- 7e70 A – create a variety of media works (e.g., a class newspaper, a story board, a radio documentary).
- 7e56 A • use the conventions (e.g., sentence structure) of oral language, and of the various media, that are appropriate to the grade (see below).
- 7e63 A – use eye contact, variations in pace, appropriate gestures, and such devices as the “pause for effect” in presentations;
- 7e8 A • proofread and correct their final drafts, focusing on grammar, punctuation, spelling, and conventions of style;

Magazine Mania

You have been hired by ABC Publishing Company to develop a magazine for young adults. Your goal, as editor, is to create a magazine and present it at the annual Magazine Media Launch.

Your magazine, based on the theme of your novel, should include: a feature article, a biography, an advertisement, an interview, a survey, a letter to the editor, a comic strip, and an article convincing people to read your novel.

The completed magazine will be launched at a media release celebration to which special guests may be invited. At the media release, each editor will present his/her own magazine. Your magazine will be submitted to the editor-in-chief (the teacher).

Feature Article Sample

Based on The Pig Man by Paul Zindel

The theme of the novel The Pig Man by Paul Zindel is relationships.

The theme is based on relationships based on the following key points:

1. John has a dysfunctional relationship with his father.

Supporting evidence, examples, and/or details from the novel The Pig Man:

John and his father can't talk to one another.

His father wants him to work at the coffee exchange, and he wants to be an actor.

His father puts a lock on the telephone so that John can't use the phone.

John plays tricks at school for attention.

2. Lorraine has a dysfunctional relationship with her mother.

Supporting evidence, examples, and/or details from the novel The Pig Man.

Her mother criticises her all the time.

Her mother makes her do all the housework.

She tells lies to her mother.

Her mother slaps her.

3. John and Lorraine develop a positive relationship with Mr. Pignati.

Supporting evidence, examples, and/or details from the novel The Pig Man:

They go to his house whenever they can.

They visit him at the hospital when he is sick.

They tell the police they are his children.

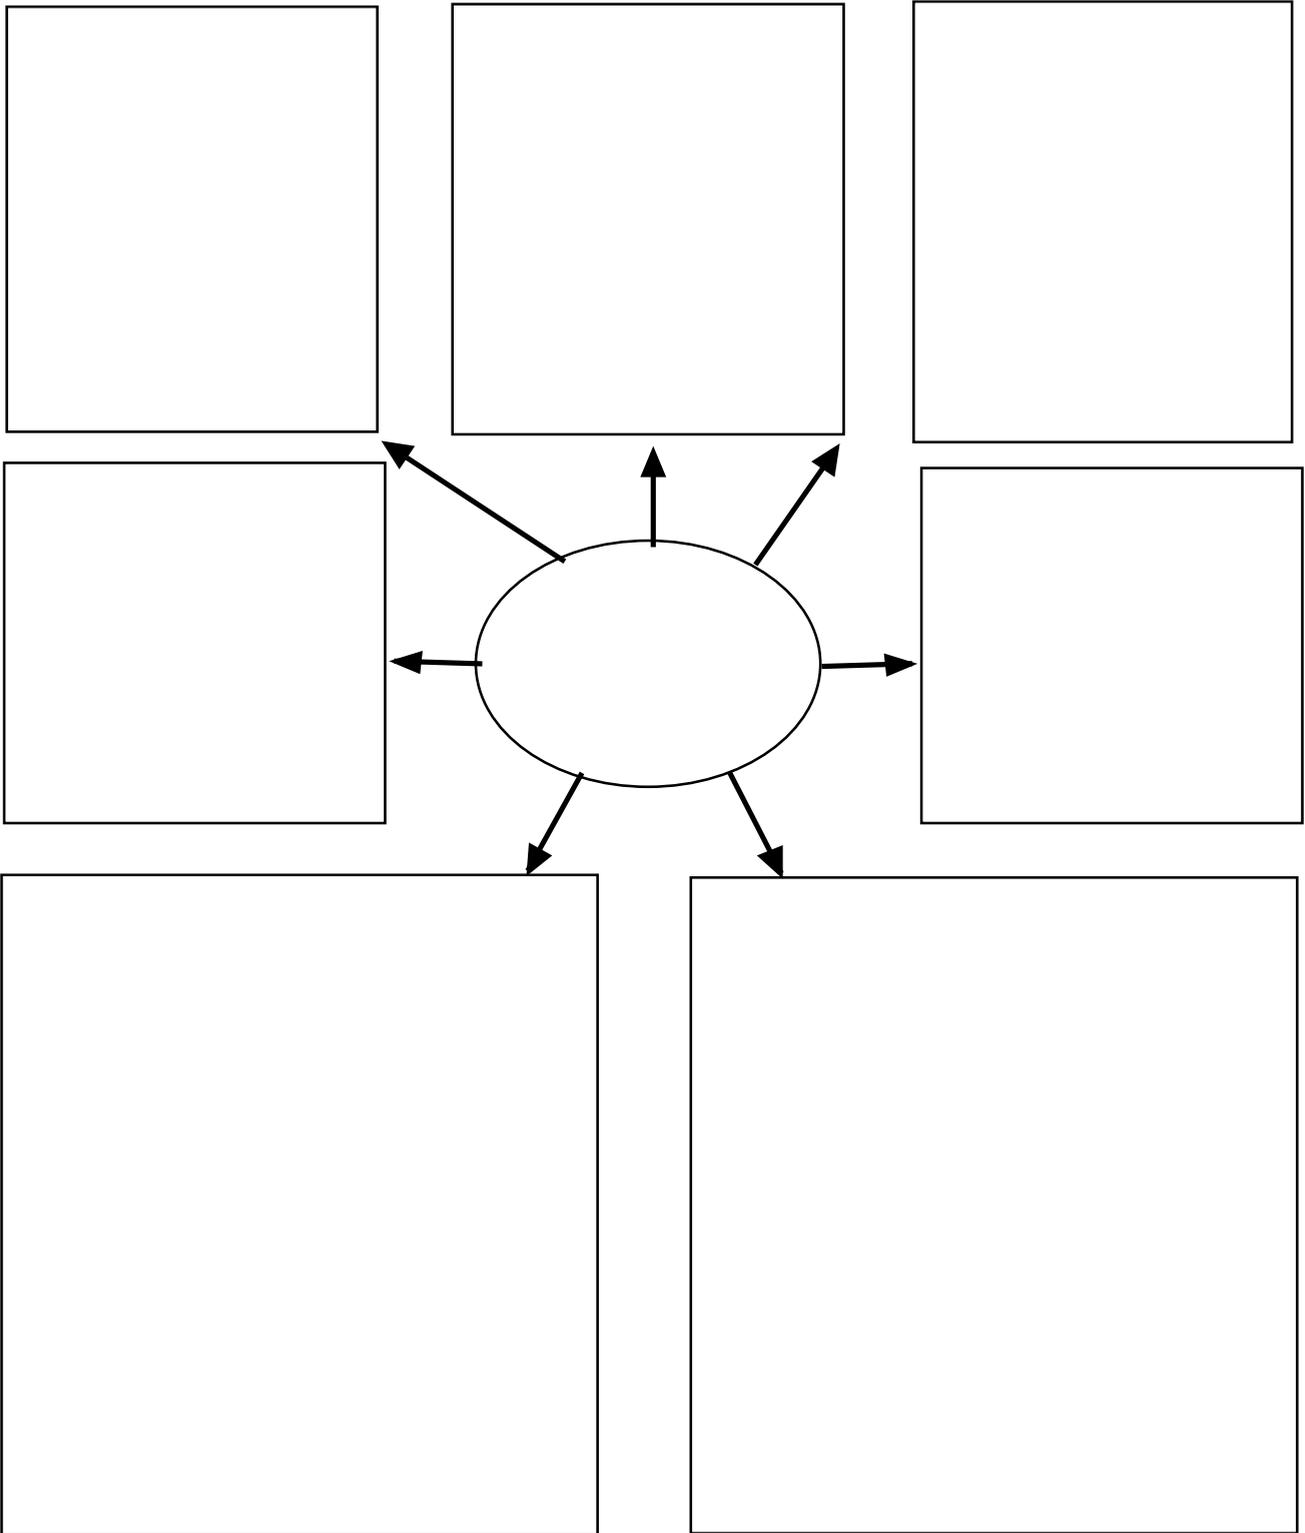

They go to the zoo with him.

Conclusions

At the end of the novel, students may reflect on John and Lorraine's relationships with their father, their mother, and the Pigman. This is a personal connection to the novel. It needs to tie back to the introduction of the feature article.

Biography Planning Sheet

In each of the following boxes, place the headings that are appropriate to your author.

How to Write a Bibliography

A bibliography is always arranged in alphabetical order. If the information takes more than one line, the second line is indented.

Book

1. Author, last name first 2. Period 3. Book title, capitalised, italicised
4. Period 5. Place where published 6. Colon (:) 7. Publisher 8. Comma 9. Copyright date 10. Period

Example:

Wilson, Eric. Spirit in the Rainforest. Toronto: Harper Collins, 1985.

Magazine

1. Author, last name first 2. Period 3. Article name and comma, in quotation marks
4. Magazine name, capitalised, underlined or italicised 5. Period 6. Volume number
7. Comma 8. Pages 9. Comma 10. Date of Magazine 11. Period

Example:

Bergman, Charles. "Right Whales," Canadian Geographic. Vol. 108, no. 2, pp42-51, April 1997.

Encyclopedia

1. Article Name and period in quotation marks 2. Encyclopedia title, capitalised, underlined or italicised 3. Comma 4. Year or edition 5. Comma 6. Volume number
7. Comma 8. Page number(s) 9. Period

Example:

"Pearson, Lester." World Book, 1987, Volume 14, pp352-353.

CD-ROM

Do exactly the same as for an encyclopedia, except leave out the volume number.

Example:

"Dogs." Compton's Multimedia Encyclopedia, 1990, pp8-11.

Website

1. Author (may be a person or an organization) 2. Period 3. Title and comma, in quotation marks 4. Website address and comma 5. Date and period

Example:

City Net. "The Berlin Wall," www.chemie.fu-verlin.de?BIW/wall.html, 1997.

Advertising Tricks

Note: This list used a cereal box as its ad; however, the tricks remain the same for any advertisement.

A Name to Remember:

A clever name links certain ideas with the product. “Yummy Power Nuggets” suggests a high-energy, delicious food.

An Appealing Image:

When advertisers photograph food, they may use anything from gelatin to window cleaner to make the product look more appetizing. The cereal you prepare won't look nearly as crunchy as the cereal shown on the box.

Free Offers:

You pay for “free” offers by having to buy a large quantity of the product (e.g., “eleven more boxes to get a T-shirt”).

Let the Customer do the Advertising:

Are you a walking advertisement? Do you have brand names on your jeans, running shoes, or T-shirts? Every time you wear the jeans, shoes or T-shirt or use the mug or pen with a company logo, you become an ad for the product.

Sweet Talk - Using the Right Words:

Advertisers know which words are fashionable. That's why they put the word NATURALLY in large type and hide the sugar by calling it “sucrose” or “dextrose.”

How to Create an Advertisement

Teacher Self

1. Choose a product, service, or issue to advertise. Give it a catchy name.

2. Decide on a target audience. Who would be most interested in your product or idea?

3. Choose a medium. What is your target audience most likely to see: a poster, a newspaper ad, a cereal box?

4. Plan a strategy. Keep your plan simple. The best ads are often those that create a simple, appealing image for the product.

5. Think of an attention-getting headline. If the large headline of your ad attracts people’s attention, they may take the time to read the smaller type.

6. Write strong, persuasive body copy. Body copy is the small type in an advertisement. It gives the details needed by the reader as to where the store is located, when it is open, when the sale begins and ends, etc.

7. Choose eye-catching visuals. Graphics grab the reader’s attention.

8. Use your design skills. Experiment with the impact of larger type, lots of empty space, bold contrasting colours.

9. Does your ad persuade? Test it on friends. Does it get their attention? Is it clear? Experiment with your ad until it contains all the required elements, is easy to read, gives the necessary information, and looks attractive and neat.

A Sample Magazine Interview

Novel Title: _____ Author: _____

Interview with the author. This interview was held in the private home of _____ on a blustery day in early January.

MW: Good afternoon, _____ . We are delighted you have agreed to be the feature interview in Survival magazine this month.

Author: Thank you! I am delighted to hear that you intend to focus your entire magazine around the theme of survival.

MW: As an adolescent, did you always want to be an author?

Author: Although I was never a dedicated student, I developed a passion for reading at an early age. After a librarian gave me a book to read — along with my first library card — I became hooked on reading. I began spending hours alone, reading one book after another. From that, I began to take an interest in writing. I always felt that my reading assisted my initial experiences as a young writer. I got so many creative ideas from what I read, I began to create my own stories. It was really a natural progression for me as a young person.

MW: Could you please explain to our adolescent readers how you developed the idea of writing the novel?

Author: The novel, _____ , is based on many of my personal experiences in the wilderness. I also felt that many adolescents would be able to connect to the main character as he experiences the difficulties of being a child from a divorced family.

MW: It is evident that the main character is a brave and courageous young man. What things do you think adolescents can learn from his strengths?

Author: The biggest thing that I would want readers to take away from the character is to continue to persevere through life's struggles. He was given an incredible opportunity to test his strength, will power, and determination -- it is evident through the novel that he rose to the occasion.

MW: Do people ever criticize you for writing mainly "boy books"?

Author: Although the novels contain a male main character, it is important to realize that girls can exhibit the same qualities. Female protagonists can also be clever, witty, and exemplify determination.

 This is a sample excerpt from an interview that may have been conducted by a student reader.

Format for a Statistical Survey

Demographics (2 to 3 questions):

This part refers to the personal information of the individual completing the survey. For instance: age group, gender, etc.

Content (4 to 6 questions):

This part refers specifically to the information the surveyor would like to collect. The questions in this section should be specific to the purpose of the survey. For instance, if the novel is about adolescents, this section of the survey should reflect their interests.

Concluding Statement:

This section thanks participants for completing the survey. In some cases, the option to include your name, number, and address is included in this section. In addition, the surveyor may ask if participants can be contacted regarding the content of the survey. The participant has the right to remain anonymous.

Letter to the Editor Analysis

Please use complete sentences.

What is the topic or issue?

What is the writer's opinion?

What evidence does the writer use to support his or her opinion? Be as specific as possible. You may want to refer directly to the letter in order to support your point of view.

Are facts stated? Is the argument an opinion based on emotion? Is there a combination of both fact and emotion?

Which part of the letter to the editor was most powerful to you as a reader? Explain why.

Point-Proof-Comment Formula Sheet

Point: What point is the author is trying to make in the article?

Proof: What evidence has the writer provided to support or refute the above stated point? List at least three examples the author uses to make his point. Use direct quotations to support the point the author is trying to make.

Comment: What is the concluding statement/thought with which the author has left the reader?
