This unit was written using the Curriculum Unit Planner, 1999-2001, which was developed in the province of Ontario by the Ministry of Education. The Planner provides electronic templates and resources to develop and share units to help implement the Ontario curriculum. This unit reflects the views of the developers of the unit and is not necessarily those of the Ministry of Education. Permission is given to reproduce this unit for any non-profit educational purpose. Teachers are encouraged to copy, edit, and adapt this unit for educational purposes. Any reference in this unit to particular commercial resources, learning materials, equipment, or technology does not reflect any official endorsements by the Ministry of Education, school boards, or associations that supported the production of this unit.

Task Context

Students explore the use and historical significance of radio as a popular medium of communication. They explore their present-day experience with radio in order to develop critical understanding of media and its purpose. The unit focuses on the analysis of various radio formats and audiences. There is an emphasis on making informed choices that reflect Catholic values about what is heard on the radio. Students work in small groups to plan and write reports, and produce audio-taped auditions for a radio station. Students practise grade-level writing and oral communication expectations through report writing and taped presentations. Students practise skills, including interviewing, persuasive writing, and reporting for a variety of purposes, to prepare for the culminating task.

Focus of this Unit

Writing For Radio is a language unit that uses analysis of the media form radio as the context to assist students to develop concepts and skills from the Language curriculum. While expectations from all three strands of Language could be achieved and assessed within this unit, the writing strand is the major focus.

Students participate in lessons and are assessed using criteria based on both the elements and techniques of radio and the concepts and skills of writing. When appropriate, throughout the unit reference has been made to opportunities to integrate expectations from the other two strands, Reading and Oral and Visual Communication.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE Overall - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: An effective communicator who speaks, writes and listens honestly and sensitively, responding critically in light of gospel values.

CGE 2a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Listens actively and critically to understand and learn in light of gospel values.

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 3e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Reflective and Creative Thinker: Adopts a holistic approach to life by integrating learning from various subject areas and experience.

CGE 5a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Works effectively as an interdependent team member.

CGE 5e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Respects the rights, responsibilities and contributions of self and others.

CGE 7f - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Responsible Citizen: Respects and affirms the diversity and interdependence of the world's peoples and cultures.

CGE 7g - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Responsible Citizen: Respects and understands the history, cultural heritage and pluralism of today's contemporary society.

Task Summary

Students participate in a media unit to explore the use of radio as part of our present-day mass communication system.

Culminating Task Assessment

Students work in combined-grade groups to present their audition tape to a fictitious radio station. The audition tape includes radio reports on news, weather, sports, and traffic, as well as an interview and advertising and promotional jingles.

While one group is presenting their audition tape, the rest of the students act as members of the board of directors of a radio station. Using information accumulated throughout the unit, they provide feedback to their peers and celebrate their successes.

Writing For RadioLanguage - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7

Students complete their Journals by focussing on what they have learned about radio. They also describe how their increased awareness of the presence or absence of Catholic Gospel Values influences their choice of radio listening.

Each component of the Culminating Task is assessed on an individual basis according to grade-specific expectations. Each group's audition tape is also assessed using a teacher-generated rubric according to specific expectations for both Grade 6 and Grade 7 Oral and Visual Communication.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 5a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Works effectively as an interdependent team member.

Links to Prior Knowledge

Students in both Grade 6 and Grade 7 need to know:

- the stages of the writing process
- strategies for working constructively in groups

The teacher must be aware of the diversity in the classroom and ensure that all students have the necessary skills required to participate in each subtask and in the culminating task.

ConsiderationsNotes to Teacher

This Elementary Curriculum Unit has been written by a team of teachers for use by other teachers. It represents the approach they took to help students achieve the knowledge and skills described in the curriculum expectations. It is expected that teachers delivering the unit will use their professional judgment in tailoring the teaching/learning to meet the needs and interests of their students and their communities. Teachers may choose to use all or part of the unit, use additional or different resources, develop additional subtasks, and/or use these units as a stimulus to develop their own units.

The times provided by the writers for the unit and each subtask are only approximations. Teachers should adjust the task times in consideration of the needs and interests of their students and the organization of program in their school.

Each unit subtask contains strategies for teaching/learning and assessment, as well as assessment recording devices. Teachers may wish to adjust strategies based on their particular situations. Where strategies are changed, corresponding changes must be made to assessment recording devices.

Some activities in the unit may require written communication with parents and guardians to provide information, receive permission or request assistance. Teachers must follow school and board policies and procedures when communicating with parents and guardians.

Units for combined grades provide examples of activities that could be used to meet the expectations for each grade. Teachers must examine the expectations listed for each subtask to determine the approach to the activities for each grade and how the instruction and assessment will be organized. Teachers may wish to develop additional activities specific to the expectations for each grade. Often the teacher must direct one grade to work on an appropriate assignment while the teacher focuses the other grade on different content.

Students must be instructed to accept "no comment" as a valid answer to any questions, and to respect that

Writing For Radio

Language - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7

people may choose not to respond at all. (questionnaires, surveys)

The URLs for the websites were verified by the writers prior to publication. Given the frequency with which these designations change, teachers should always verify the websites prior to assigning them for student use.

Teachers need to consult their board policies regarding use of any copyrighted materials. Before reproducing materials for student use from printed publications, teachers need to ensure that their board has a Copyright licence and that this licence covers the resources they wish to use. Before screening videos/films with their students, teachers need to ensure that their board/school has obtained the appropriate public performance videocassette licence from an authorized distributor. Teachers are reminded that much of the material on the Internet is protected by copyright. Copyright is usually owned by the person or organization that created the work. Reproduction of any work or substantial part of any work on the Internet is not allowed without the permission of the owner.

Gospel Values and the Catholic Graduate Expectations

The guiding principles that inform the writing of distinctively Catholic curriculum are derived from the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. These were taught explicitly in sermons and parables and implicitly through Jesus' actions. The history of our Catholic tradition consists of striving to live and model these Gospel values.

The Catholic graduate expectations can be seen as our expression of how these Gospel values can be translated into action. These values are at the very core of our Catholic understanding of what it means to be human.

Listening to the Radio

Initially and throughout the unit, students should be given opportunities to listen to various radio stations, including both national and local, and programmes which appeal to a wide variety of audiences. Teachers may wish to focus on CBC Radio for the culminating task as it is available across Ontario or choose a local radio station which is more familiar to the students. Teachers must be aware of the content students might be exposed to, in order to ensure that it is free of discriminatory, exclusionary, or inappropriate subjects or references. Teachers must also validate and encourage students to listen to radio stations in the language which their families speak. ESL students should be encouraged to continue language development in their first language. Students may need to discuss the difference between target and actual audiences. Participating in the various "Listening Surveys" helps clarify this concept. The culminating task could be presented as an oral presentation instead of an audio tape.

Valuing Diversity

Ensure that respect for individual listening choices is maintained during all class and small group discussions. Students' previous experiences and understanding of radio as a medium for communication may vary widely for many different reasons. The teacher's awareness of the students' knowledge, skills, and experiences and diverse backgrounds (cultural, ESL, personal experiences, home and community environments, and special needs) must be the starting point of this unit.

Writing Genres

The specific formats of writing (expository, interviewing, persuasive, and/or survey creation) have been included using many of the writing expectations. If all of the specific formats of writing have not been taught/reviewed, teachers may wish to choose only some of the subtasks and reduce the elements for the culminating tasks.

Unit Folders

Students create individual Unit Folders, in which they keep all written assignments, reflective journals, and audiotapes, which will be collected at various times and assessed by the teacher. In the culminating task, groups choose from individual student's Unit Folders to compile what will be presented on their audition tape or included in their oral presentation. Students are instructed that the written and oral work of each member of the "culminating task group" must be fairly represented in their final product. The teacher's anecdotal notes should record information regarding fair distribution of work.

The Culminating Task

The culminating task provides an opportunity for students to demonstrate what they have learned throughout the unit and how they can independently apply this learning in new learning situations. Some students may need a high level of support to complete the culminating task. Read the culminating task thoroughly before planning the unit and consider how accommodations apply both at the end and throughout the unit.

Writing For Radio

Language - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7

Teachers need to assign students to combined-grade work groups in which they work throughout the unit and in the culminating task. Within these groups, students develop life skills such as contributing to a team, consensus building, and respect for individual opinions or ideas. Students are assessed according to grade-appropriate expectations.

Assessment

Opportunities for initial, formative, and summative assessments are provided through a variety of strategies and devices. Only expectations selected for summative assessment, are checked as assessed. Assessments focus on the following writing and oral communication concepts and skills: expository writing; persuasive writing; interviewing; report writing, and individual oral reports. The assessment of media communication concepts and skills includes identification of the roles of professionals involved in radio, description of elements of radio programming, analysis and interpretation of various radio programmes, and creation of a sample radio programme. Each component of the culminating task is assessed on an individual basis, although each student will not have every component represented on the audition tape. Each member of the group must have contributed at least one component to the group's audition tape. Teachers assess each group's audition tape.

Initial assessment is used to:

- determine starting points for teaching and learning;
- find out about specific interests that students have in the topic;
- know if the students have the prerequisite knowledge and skills to begin the planned instruction;
- know if some students already have enough knowledge and skills to need extension activities;
- identify students who need additional support throughout the unit.

Initial assessment is based on:

- the expectations selected for the unit;
- the expectations from previous grades or strands;
- the Achievement Charts for the appropriate subject.

Once the initial assessment is completed, the following will be evident:

- what lessons need to be taught -- introductory, reinforcement, consolidation, or extension;
- how to group students for specific lessons;
- what resources are to be used (easier or more difficult);
- what teaching strategies would be most appropriate for specific students.

Formative assessment is the ongoing monitoring of student achievement to determine the progress a student is making throughout the unit.

The teacher monitors the student progress to:

- give them feedback about how they can improve;
- decide what additional lessons need to be taught;
- decide which resources need to be added or changed;
- adjust instruction as necessary to address individual needs.

Formative assessment begins with the first teaching/learning activities and continues to the end of the unit. Each lesson includes an assessment component that provides continuous monitoring of progress and feedback about how to improve. These assessment components include a variety of strategies. The strategy used at a particular time depends on what information the teacher is trying to gain. For example, to know if a student is meeting timelines, review a learning log with the student. To know if the student is gaining the right knowledge about a topic, a conference or quiz would be appropriate.

Formative assessment feedback should be descriptive, not evaluative, because the teacher is assessing for improvement and not making final judgements. Students need detailed feedback which notes positive comments on what they have done and provides them with details of how they can improve in certain areas, e.g., two strengths and a next step. Formative assessment should determine what and how the teacher teaches.

When designing a major assignment, build in opportunities to give students feedback throughout the completion of the assignment. Students should be informed continuously about how they are doing and what they need to know/do to improve.

Summative assessment is a demonstration of the consolidation of specific skills and knowledge that students have recently learned and practised. It is an opportunity for students to apply their learning in a new situation. This comprehensive, final demonstration of student learning lets you know what students have learned after all the teaching and practising are done.

During summative assessment, the teacher:

- gains a comprehensive, final description of student achievement;
- help students, parents, and yourself plan further instruction and learning activities.

Summative assessment allows the teacher to determine the extent to which the expectations of the unit have been achieved. Summative assessment information contributes to the student's evaluation that will be reported on the report card. Summative assessment data may be collected during the unit/term several times when students are completing major assignments.

Adaptations

Adaptations include adjustments for exceptional pupils, students with special education needs, and/or ESL/ELD students. Teachers should consult students' Individual Educational Plans (IEP) for specific directions on required accommodations and/or modifications. Use the Teacher Companion (see Ontario Curriculum Unit Planner) to browse, copy, or bookmark Special Education and ESL/ELD strategies.

Writing For RadioLanguage - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7

1 Radio Yesterday and Today

The objective of this task is to activate students' prior knowledge about the topic.

Class charts are created using a KWL - Know/Want to Know/Learned organizer to outline the historical development of radio in communications and to chart familiar radio stations, radio personnel, and programming. Students explore the role of radio in their lives by completing individual surveys of their own Listening Habits. Students use their journals to reflect on the role radio plays in their lives.

Students in both Grade 6 and Grade 7 begin the unit by accessing prior knowledge about the radio as a form of media and preparing unit folders and journals.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Listens actively and critically to understand and learn in light of gospel values.

CGE 5e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Respects the rights, responsibilities and contributions of self and others.

2 Introduction of Culminating Task

The teacher generates a discussion focussing on radio as a form of media. The culminating task is explained to the class. The culminating task involves the students working in small combined-grade groups to plan and write radio reports, and produce an audio-tape or presentation for a radio station audition (BLM 2.1 Student Outline for Culminating Task). The teacher starts ongoing anecdotal records to assess individual and group skills.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 4a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Self-Directed, Responsible, Lifelong Learner : Demonstrates a confident and positive sense of self and respect for the dignity and welfare of others;

CGE 5c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Develops one's God-given potential and makes a meaningful contribution to society.

CGE 5a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Works effectively as an interdependent team member.

3 What Did We Hear?

Analysis of radio programmes includes opportunities to listen to and analyse a variety of appropriate formats available on CBC or local radio stations while working in whole class, small group, and individual situations.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Listens actively and critically to understand and learn in light of gospel values.

CGE 2e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Uses and integrates the Catholic faith tradition, in the critical analysis of the arts, media, technology and information systems to enhance the quality of life.

CGE 3f - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Reflective and Creative Thinker: Examines, evaluates and applies knowledge of interdependent systems (physical, political, ethical, socio- economic and ecological) for the development of a just and compassionate society.

Writing For Radio

Language - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7

4 What Shall I Say?

Students are taught the skills of interviewing and are given the opportunity to practise the interview process. They work in pairs to produce a written script and audio tape as they role-play an interviewer who interviews an interesting person (an athlete, recording artist, government official, local hero). In Subtask 9, each culminating task group chooses one example from their group's tapes which is used as part of their final audio tape.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Listens actively and critically to understand and learn in light of gospel values.

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 7f - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Responsible Citizen: Respects and affirms the diversity and interdependence of the world's peoples and cultures.

5 Are You Convinced?

Students identify questionable strategies and exaggerated claims presenters use in advertising to influence an audience. They identify factual information presented in advertising using products familiar to them. After reflecting on personal situations with the objective of developing an increased awareness of the use of persuasion (overt and subtle), students prepare jingles to be taped. Assessment is in the form of a teacher-generated checklist based on the oral communication expectations that include attention to awareness of audience. Students write individual letters to present to the board of directors of the fictional radio station in the culminating task.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE Overall - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: An effective communicator who speaks, writes and listens honestly and sensitively, responding critically in light of gospel values.

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 5e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Respects the rights, responsibilities and contributions of self and others.

6 Hear This! Write to Read.

Students focus on communicating ideas and information for a variety of purposes and to specific audiences. They listen to a variety of news, weather, traffic, and sports reports on local radio stations and discuss significant information included in each of these types of reports. Students individually write fictional news, weather, traffic, or sports reports which are collected and assessed using a rating scale based on grade-specific expectations. Students practise their reports orally while they focus on the techniques needed to give effective oral reports. In their Journals, students focus on how radio is a media that provides opportunities for jobs for a wide variety of people.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 5e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Respects the rights, responsibilities and contributions of self and others.

7 Our Voices Are Heard!

Students work in combined-grade groups to plan to complete a program log and produce an audiotape for a radio audition. The teacher continues to keep anecdotal records used to assess oral communication and group skills. Peer feedback is used to assist students in revising and editing their work. Students complete a self-assessment of their contribution to group work.

8 Radio Audition

Students work in combined-grade groups to present their audition tape to a fictitious radio station. The audition tape includes radio reports on news, weather, sports, and traffic, as well as an interview and advertising and promotional jingles.

While one group is presenting their audition tape, the rest of the students act as members of the board of directors of a radio station. Using information accumulated throughout the unit, they provide feedback to their peers and celebrate their successes.

Students complete their Journals by focussing on what they have learned about radio. They also describe how their increased awareness of the presence or absence of Catholic Gospel Values influences their choice of radio listening.

1.1 Introductory Discussion - Whole Class

Explain to the students they will be participating in a Language unit which has a dual focus on writing and oral communication through the medium of radio. Engage the students in a discussion of the role radio plays in our personal lives by sharing specific examples of personal or family experiences. Invite students to share their experiences with radio. Teachers must be sensitive to the fact that some students might not listen to the radio at home and structure this activity so that it is inclusive to all students.

Together, with the class create a KWL chart (a visual organizer Know/Want To Know/Learned) to elicit their knowledge of radio. Record this information on a chart which will be displayed throughout this unit. The following focus questions might be used to stimulate class discussion:

What is the purpose of radio programming?

What are the components of a radio programme?

What different kinds of radio programmes are available?

What are some of the reasons people listen to the radio?

Are there different programmes available for various age groups, cultures, languages, regions/localities, etc.?

The teacher may wish to introduce historical information about the development of radio (see BLM 1.1) and visit appropriate websites. Together revisit the KWL chart and add appropriate information. Continue to display this chart.

1.2 Familiar Radio Stations - Combined Grade/Small Groups

In mixed-grade groups of four to six students, invite students to join in a discussion about their favourite radio stations. Inform students that they are sharing information about their favourite radio stations in small groups and that the expectation is that they demonstrate respect and appreciation for each others' preferences. Ask students, How do we demonstrate respect? (listen actively, look at the speaker, look interested, smile, etc.) Remind students to value individual past experiences and diverse backgrounds (cultural, ESL, personal experiences, home and community environments, and special needs) which may be presented in this discussion. Share with students the Catholic Graduate Expectations of an effective communicator and a collaborative contributor. Following this discussion, as a class, brainstorm familiar radio stations, radio personnel, and programmes. Record this information on a chart that is displayed throughout this unit.

1.3 Listening Habits Survey - Individual

Have students create individual Unit Folders, in which they keep all written assignments that are collected and assessed by the teacher. Inform the students that work from these folders is used for their culminating task (see Notes to Teacher in the Unit Overview). Distribute Listening Habits Survey to each student. (BLM 1.2) Using an example of this Listening Habits Survey as an overhead, lead students through the activity. Students complete these worksheets and place them in their Unit Folders. These are used by students as a basis for the questionnaires they will create in another subtask.

1.4 Journal - Individual

Explain to students that the Journal is an ongoing component of this unit. Tell students they are going to begin this journal with a reflection of what they learned guided by some set questions. This first journal entry should begin with the teacher modelling a possible journal entry created by following the prompts from the guiding questions. Possible reflection questions to guide students are:

(Grade 6) What did you learn in regards to radio personnel from today's lesson? How did you contribute to your group's discussion?

(Grade 7) What did you learn about the different parts of radio shows? How did you contribute to your group's discussion?

Tell students to keep their journals in their Unit Folders as they will continue to write in them frequently throughout this unit.

Adaptations

In addition to consulting the student's IEP, adaptations may include but are not limited to the following suggestions.

The teacher should make final decisions regarding the appropriateness of all small group memberships to ensure that students experience personal success through recognition of their dignity, capabilities, and needs by fellow group members. Ensure students are placed in supportive small groups.

personal Listening Surveys. Many students may view radio as a means of becoming familiar with new music selections. Point out to students that recording artists are dependent on radio exposure to establish popularity therefore generating possible revenue from record/CD sales.

Create a class tally chart and/or stem and leaf plot on the estimated weekly listening times that were recorded in their individual surveys (this may be integrated with Mathematics classes). Students may be surprised to discover how much time they spend listening to the radio on a weekly basis.

2.2 Explanation of Culminating Task - Whole Class

Distribute copies of the Student Outline for Culminating Task, BLM 2.1. Explain to students that they have the opportunity to work in combined-grade groups to plan and produce an audition tape. Assure students that during this unit they have the opportunity to listen to and explore various radio formats that will assist them in preparing for the culminating task.

Outline the expectations on which each grade will be assessed in the culminating task. Share appropriate assessment tools for each grade.

Grade 6:

Writing

- produce a variety of different forms of writing, revising, and editing certain pieces for publication (jingle for a fictional product, two radio reports, persuasive letters, and journal entries)

Group Skills

- work effectively in small groups to complete an audio tape

Oral and Visual

- capture the audience's attention by using exciting vocabulary, a variety of sentence structures, and tone of voice to convince and persuade listeners

Grade 7:

Writing

- produce a variety of different forms of writing (jingle for a fictional product, two radio reports, persuasive letters, and journal entries)

- revising, editing, and proofreading final drafts

Group Skills

- work effectively in small groups to complete an audio tape and talk about why the group was successful

Oral and Visual

- identify and describe categories of works typical to radio and use words and phrases to signal a new or important point to be made

Review the Student Outline with the class and answer any questions. Describe the dual roles each student plays in the culminating task. While one group's tape is being used for the audition, the remaining students in the class act as a member of the board of directors of a radio station. They need to use the information learned throughout the unit to provide feedback to their peers and celebrate their successes. Make sure that students understand that each group's audition tape must contain the following student creations:

- a newscast;
- an interview;
- a weather report;
- a traffic report;
- a sports report;
- advertising and promotional jingles appropriately placed throughout the tape to address transitions and maintain audience interest.

Distribute to each student the rest of the Culminating Task Package including the following:

- letter to parents outlining unit BLM 2.2
- individual blank audio tape

At this time the teacher may wish to distribute the various assessment tools such as checklists, rating scales, etc., so that students may refer to these as they work through the unit.

Remind students all work is to be kept in their Unit Folders.

Ensure that the parent letter is on official school letterhead and has been seen by school administrators.

2.3 Culminating Task Groups - Combined-Grade Groups

Place students in appropriate culminating task groups. Have them discuss their ideas on how they will approach this task. They should generate a list of any questions they may need answered by the teacher. Share CGE 4a and generate a discussion on how students can demonstrate a confident and positive sense of self and respect for the dignity and welfare of others while working in their culminating task groups. Make sure students understand that while working in the group they will have responsibilities for both group accomplishments and their own individual contributions to the group project. Discuss CGE 5a that directs them to work effectively as interdependent team members. Extend the discussion to have students understand that we are expected by CGE 5c to develop our God-given potential and make meaningful contributions. Each group member identifies areas where his/her particular gifts and talents might be of assistance to the group.

Tell students that individual assessment will be carried out throughout this unit.

2.4 Journal - Individual

The journal for this subtask should focus on students' collaborative contributions and how students' gifts and talents will benefit their culminating task group. Collect these journals and provide feedback to assist students to enhance their group skills.

Possible Reflection Questions

How did you demonstrate a confident and positive sense of self?

Did you demonstrate respect for the dignity and welfare of others?

How will your gifts, strengths, and talents benefit your culminating task group?

Notes to Teacher

During class and small group discussions assess student needs for those who have had limited or no radio exposure. These students may need to be provided with additional opportunities to listen to and talk about a variety of radio programs.

Student's experiences with radio-listening may be limited; in the constant search for continuous music, some students may avoid listening to news, weather, commentaries, etc. To focus on the whole impact of radio as a form of media, students must become aware of the importance of the variety of information that is conveyed during a program. In times of disaster, radios run on batteries may be the only source of information available.

Analysis of radio programmes includes opportunities to listen to and analyse a variety of appropriate formats available on CBC or local radio stations while working in whole class, small group, and individual situations.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Listens actively and critically to understand and learn in light of gospel values.

CGE 2e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Uses and integrates the Catholic faith tradition, in the critical analysis of the arts, media, technology and information systems to enhance the quality of life.

CGE 3f - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Reflective and Creative Thinker: Examines, evaluates and applies knowledge of interdependent systems (physical, political, ethical, socio- economic and ecological) for the development of a just and compassionate society.

Expectations

- 6e63 – identify questionable strategies (e.g., exaggerated claims, one-sided presentation of information) presenters use to influence an audience;
- 7e67 – identify and describe categories of works typical of a particular medium (e.g., television – sitcom, talk show, news broadcast, interview, children’s program, commercial);
- 7e54 • analyse and interpret media works;
- 6e54 • analyse media works;

Assessment Recording DevicesAnecdotal Record
ChecklistTeaching / Learning*3.1 Radio Listening - Class Discussion and Individual/Group Work

Invite students (whole class) to discuss what kinds of information they might hear while listening to a certain time period on the radio. Create a class chart to record their responses.

Using BLM 3.2 on an overhead, ask students to assist you in completing each blank section (news report, weather report, etc.) based on what they think each might involve. Extend their learning by adding information (use BLM 3.1 for teacher reference). Make sure to note tone of voice, vocabulary and type of information, where appropriate.

Select a time during the school day (directly after the above lesson, if possible) to listen to the radio. This time would be most beneficial if it was "on the hour" so that students would probably hear news, weather, sports, traffic report, and a commentary/music piece. The teacher must select a program that is appropriate for students and be sensitive to issues that might arise during a news discussion that might affect some students in the classroom.

Students in Grade 6 are instructed to listen to and record words that tell them they are listening to a news report, weather report, etc., and any exciting words that capture their attention. Explain BLM 3.4 by putting a blank sheet on an overhead and demonstrating one example (Grade 7 students may listen as this is explained as it should be a review for them and serves as a reminder of this feature).

Grade 7 students are instructed to focus on what they heard during the time block (categories of work). Discuss the activity sheet (BLM 3.3) that they fill out while listening to the same radio program. (Grade 6 students may listen to this explanation as it will give them the understanding of how they can share information with the Grade 7 students when meeting in combined grade groupings).

After listening to the program and completing the respective BLMs, have students in Grade 6 meet in small groups to share their work, while students in Grade 7 do the same.

3.2 Convene as a Whole Class (Grade 6 and Grade 7)

Challenge students to analyse media content to determine the point of view presented. News reports usually try to avoid giving a perspective by stating events, facts, and offering witness statements from both sides, whenever possible. A commentary states an opinion and takes one side's perspective of an issue. Choose a current issue that would appear in the media, for example, a news topic that would appear in several newspapers in both opinion and reportage genres. Have two newspaper reports (differing perspectives) and two opinions/editorials (differing perspectives) on overheads. Use Analysing Perspective (BLM 3.5) to cooperatively analyse each article to determine the author's perspective. Assist the students to determine the point of view being presented by asking such questions as: Whose side are they on? Who are they giving credit to? Are certain facts emphasized to persuade the reader to think in a certain way? Create a cooperative definition of 'perspective' to be displayed on chart paper. Together discuss why only one perspective might be presented. Explain to students how the "money behind" any media (including ownership and advertising sponsors) is able to control what information may be presented in some cases. This should be a review for Grade 7 students. They may record their perspective in their journals.

3.3 Listening/Analysis - Individual (Grade 7 students)

As a follow-up activity the teacher provides the opportunity for the Grade 7 students to listen to a excerpt of a radio program during class time. Distribute copies of BLM 3.3 to students to complete individually. Collect completed analysis sheets and assess for recognition of various components of radio programming by using the Program Analysis Checklist (BLM 3.6). Provide formative feedback on each student's analysis and have the students keep these in their Unit Folders to assist them when writing their reports. Teachers may have an area in a library or another space in the classroom/school for students to complete this task. If students are not working directly in the classroom, ensure that adult supervision is arranged.

3.4 Shared Listening/Analysis (Grade 6 students)

Select another brief program which the Grade 6 students can listen to. Before they listen to the program, discuss the following questions and ask students to jot down points that they can use in their responses. Discuss, as a group, the responses related to these questions.

- a) What is the point of view presented in the program?
- b) Do you agree with this point of view? Why or why not?

3.5 Journal - Individual Work

Students explain why they agreed or disagreed with the point of view presented in the broadcast. They consider this in light of gospel values.

Possible Reflection Questions

What is the role point of view plays in radio?

How does my radio station help to promote a just and compassionate society? If my radio station does not promote these values, am I willing to change my listening habits? Why or why not?

Writing For RadioNotes to Teacher

During this subtask students should be given opportunities to listen to various radio stations, including both national and local, and programs which appeal to a wide variety of audiences. Teachers may wish to focus on CBC Radio for the culminating task, as it is available across Ontario, or choose a local radio station which is more familiar to the students. Careful pre-screening of the type of programs that will be listened to in class is necessary. Teachers must be aware of the programming to which students will be exposed in order to ensure that it will be free of discriminatory, exclusionary, or inappropriate content.

Be prepared to discuss the prevalence of inappropriate material on popular radio stations which does not reflect the social moral perspective of the teachings of the Catholic Church (social responsibility, human solidarity, and life and social issues).

Catholic Gospel Values

The guiding principles of Catholic curriculum are derived from the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. These were taught explicitly in sermons and parables and implicitly through Jesus' actions. The history of our Catholic tradition consists of our striving to live and model these Gospel values. The Catholic Graduate Expectations can be seen as our expression of how these Gospel values can be translated into action. These values are at the very core of our Catholic understanding of what it means to be human.

Tell students they will be exploring the New Testament to gain a deeper understanding of values that are important for living our Christian faith. Distribute Bibles and read the following passages:

1. Be just to all (John 8:1-11)
2. Be honest in all dealings (Matthew 23:1-5)
3. Treat everyone as an individual (John 4:4-29)

As a class, explore each example and summarize how it reflects the gospel value listed. Give the students time to record this summary. Have students record a time when they showed this value in their own lives. With student input, the teacher develops a chart reflecting gospel values. Use Guiding Principles of a Christian Way of Life as background. Students explore where they see these gospel values exhibited in daily situations. Draw students' attention to how they have already addressed some of these gospel values in discussions about Catholic Graduate Expectations and through their responses in their Journals. Students should reflect on these values when working in groups.

Teacher Reflections

Description

Students are taught the skills of interviewing and are given the opportunity to practise the interview process. They work in pairs to produce a written script and audio tape as they role-play an interviewer who interviews an interesting person (an athlete, recording artist, government official, local hero). In Subtask 9, each culminating task group chooses one example from their group's tapes which is used as part of their final audio tape.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Listens actively and critically to understand and learn in light of gospel values.

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 7f - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Responsible Citizen: Respects and affirms the diversity and interdependence of the world's peoples and cultures.

Expectations

- 6e7 • revise and edit their work in collaboration with others, seeking and evaluating feedback, and focusing on content, organization, and appropriateness of vocabulary for audience;
- 6e48 • ask and answer questions to obtain and clarify information;
- 7e7 • revise and edit their work, focusing on content and elements of style (e.g., diction), independently and in collaboration with others;
- 6e64 – identify the various types of professionals involved in producing a media work (e.g., newswriter, photographer, camera operator, film director) and describe the jobs they do;
- 7e48 • ask questions and discuss different aspects of ideas in order to clarify their thinking;
- 6e55 • create a variety of media works;
- 6e54 • analyse media works;
- 7e54 • analyse and interpret media works;
- 7e56 • use the conventions (e.g., sentence structure) of oral language, and of the various media, that are appropriate to the grade (see below).
- 7e58 – use words and phrases to signal that a new or important point is about to be made (e.g., My central point is. . ., Note that. . ., First. . . Second. . . Third. . .);
- 7e59 – use analogies and comparisons to develop and clarify ideas;
- 7e62 – identify some of the ways in which non-verbal communication techniques (e.g., tone of voice and body language) can affect audiences, and use these techniques in their own speech to arouse and maintain interest, and convince and persuade their listeners;
- 7e63 – use eye contact, variations in pace, appropriate gestures, and such devices as the “pause for effect” in presentations;

- 6e56 • use the conventions (e.g., sentence structure) of oral language, and of the various media, that are appropriate to the grade (see below).

Teaching / Learning4.1 Interview Format - Whole Class

Students create interview questions and write acceptable responses for a staged interview with an interesting person (an athlete, recording artist, government official, local hero) for their culminating task. Have students begin to think about which interesting person they might want to pretend to interview for their culminating task. The culminating task group will choose one of the group's interviews to be used in their final audition tape.

Review with students the criteria expected for creating interview questions for their specific grade level. If this topic has not been addressed this year in either grade, a teacher-directed lesson will be necessary before assigning this activity. Students need to be reminded that the format of the questions is important when preparing for an interview as they want to elicit more than yes/no answers. They need to write questions which will yield open-ended (qualitative) answers in order to gather interesting information from the interviewee. Model questioning with students. Remind students that they are expected to observe during their interviews. Explain to students that both the questions posed and the accompanying answers must respect and affirm the diversity and interdependence of all peoples.

4.2 Practise Interview - Work In Pairs

Direct students to choose a partner from within their culminating task group. Students each identify a topic which they would be willing to be interviewed about (e.g., hobby, pet, travel, etc.). Stipulate that within each pair, the interview topics must differ. Each student writes five questions for their partner to answer which requires qualitative answers. Remind students the questions must reflect sensitivity to others while allowing their partner to present information and ideas clearly and honestly. Refer students back to BLM 3.5 and 3.6 to assist them to formulate questions and plan responses. Each student interviews their partner. During this process, the teacher circulates throughout the classroom, assisting where needed, giving formative feedback, and making anecdotal records.

After this process, instruct each pair of students to choose an interesting person to interview for their culminating task interview. Explain to students that they need to research the person chosen before the next formal lesson/subtask.

4.3 Analysing Professional Interview - Whole Class/Work In Pairs

As a class, listen to an interview on a radio talk show or alternatively view a video that shows an interview. Direct students to focus on the interviewer's technique to discover how the interviewer puts the interviewee at ease, holds the audience's attention, and elicits interesting information. While listening to the interview, draw students'

Writing For RadioLanguage - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7*170 mins

attention to how radio personnel use tone of voice, volume, and pace to enhance the message. Also, point out how carefully these individuals enunciate their words (pronounce words carefully, almost to the extreme at times). Following this activity conduct a discussion to highlight why this example was chosen as a successful interview. Discuss how the personalities, in the above interview, signified that an important point was being made and how analogies and comparisons were used to develop and clarify ideas. Point out that figurative language, e.g., similes and metaphors, can add interest.

Working in pairs, students choose the personality that one of them will assume, and together prepare the questions that the interviewer will ask of that personality. Students research this personality in order to create the questions. During this process, the teacher circulates throughout the classroom, assisting where needed, giving formative feedback, and making anecdotal records.

4.4 Investigate Role of Radio Professional - Whole Class / Work In Pairs

Provide a teacher-directed lesson on specific roles of professionals involved in radio, referring to the information in BLM 4.1 Roles of Radio Professionals for Grade 6 students (review for Grade 7 students). Using a tool such as "Career Cruising," have students work in pairs formed from the culminating task groups to research the role of any professional job within the radio business. Instruct each pair to explore several interviews with radio personnel as presented on this website.

Following this, have the students, working in their pairs, write the script for the culminating task interview. Note: Grade 7 students may link this activity with Goals For Career Development in their Annual Education Plan.

4.5 Rehearse, Revise, and Practise Interviews - Work In Pairs

Provide opportunities for the students to tape, listen to, and revise the tape after checking for effective use of tone of voice, pace, volume, and enunciation. Students join another "pair" who listen to their tape and provide feedback. At this point, they may want to revise the tape, if necessary. Inform students that the tape will be collected and formatively assessed. Teachers could develop their own version of an interview rubric/checklist using student input. A separate rubric or checklist must be created for both Grade 6 and Grade 7 students.

Conference with students to discuss and set goals highlighting areas for improvement. Encourage students to revise and edit their work until their final product is completed. This final product is placed in the Unit Folder and summatively assessed at the end of the unit.

4.6 Journal - Individual

The journal for this subtask for Grade 6 students should focus on the various professional roles in radio by making the connections between their gifts and talents and how they could apply these in the real world setting of working as a radio professional.

Possible Reflection Questions

How could I use my gifts and talents as a radio professional?

In the questions and answers I prepared for the interviews, did I demonstrate respect for the diversity of the world's peoples and cultures?

For Grade 7 students, the journal should focus on the techniques that various interviewers used to signal that an important point was being made.

Teacher Reflections

Description

Students identify questionable strategies and exaggerated claims presenters use in advertising to influence an audience. They identify factual information presented in advertising using products familiar to them. After reflecting on personal situations with the objective of developing an increased awareness of the use of persuasion (overt and subtle), students prepare jingles to be taped. Assessment is in the form of a teacher-generated checklist based on the oral communication expectations that include attention to awareness of audience. Students write individual letters to present to the board of directors of the fictional radio station in the culminating task.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE Overall - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: An effective communicator who speaks, writes and listens honestly and sensitively, responding critically in light of gospel values.

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 5e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Respects the rights, responsibilities and contributions of self and others.

Expectations

- 7e5 A • produce pieces of writing using a variety of forms (e.g., descriptive, narrative, and expository compositions), techniques and resources appropriate to the form and purpose, and materials from other media (e.g., diagrams, illustrations);
- 7e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to outline an argument, to report on observations) and to specific audiences, using forms appropriate for their purpose and topic (e.g., write a lab report for an audience familiar with the scientific terminology);
- 6e63 – identify questionable strategies (e.g., exaggerated claims, one-sided presentation of information) presenters use to influence an audience;
- 6e66 – create a variety of media works (e.g., create a video advertisement for a book as a member of an “advertising team”).
- 6e56 A • use the conventions (e.g., sentence structure) of oral language, and of the various media, that are appropriate to the grade (see below).
- 6e60 – use tone of voice and gestures to enhance the message and help convince or persuade listeners in conversations, discussions, or presentations;
- 7e56 A • use the conventions (e.g., sentence structure) of oral language, and of the various media, that are appropriate to the grade (see below).
- 6e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to inform, to persuade, to explain) and to specific audiences (e.g., write the instructions for building an electrical circuit for an audience unfamiliar with the technical terminology);
- 6e3 A • organize information to convey a central idea, using well-linked paragraphs;
- 7e3 A • organize information to develop a central idea, using well-linked and well-developed paragraphs;

Teaching / Learning5.1 Analysis of Media Ads - Whole Class/Grade-Specific Groups

Teach a lesson on the difference between "facts presented" and "exaggerated claims" using advertisements available. Have students brainstorm, in their groups, how they are persuaded to buy such products through techniques used in television, radio, and print ads. Allow opportunity for students to share this with the class and receive feedback from their peers and the teacher.

Teach a lesson using BLM 5.1 as teacher reference on the approaches advertisers use to convince consumers to buy their products. Elicit information from students and categorize the various advertising approaches. Include in this discussion how sound effects, familiar music, and dramatic tone of voice draw and maintain a consumer's attention. Also discuss what approaches are used to appeal to various target audiences.

5.2 Advertising Claims - Whole Class

Have students identify products that are familiar and of interest to them, e.g., hair product, deodorant, toothpaste, etc. Together, identify the factual information presented in advertising these products and record on an overhead of BLM 5.2. Now have the students brainstorm for exaggerated claims for this product. Add these to the comparison chart on the overhead. Discuss with students the values these ads promote. Ask whether they think these ads are promising that consumers will be popular, beautiful, successful, happy, or have a perfect life if they use these products. Add students' ideas in the "values" column on the overhead.

5.3 Advertising Analysis (Radio) - Whole Class/Combined Grade Groups

Together as a class listen to one or two commercials on the radio. Discuss the advertising techniques heard. Repeat this activity until students have an understanding of analysing radio advertisements. Have students listen to another radio commercial and complete BLM 5.4. Grade 7 students share their previous knowledge and experience.

5.4 Advertising Analysis (Print) - Grade-Specific Groups (Optional)

Students work in small grade groups to explore two newspaper or magazine advertisements to analyse them for persuasive features. Grade 6 students complete BLM 5.3 and Grade 7 students complete BLM 5.4.

5.5 Application of Persuasion Technique - Combined Groups

Each small group is given the same set of task cards (BLM 5.5), outlining possible scenarios for persuasion. Each student selects one task card and prepares a one-minute talk trying to persuade group members to agree with a request or point of view. The rest of the group role-plays the designated audience from the task card and gives feedback according to level of success of persuasion.

5.6 Advertising/Promotion Jingles - Individual

Following the lessons on advertising techniques used to influence an audience, students use the knowledge they have gained to write a jingle which is audiotaped. The teacher should list the features of jingles, with student input before students participate in this activity. All Grade 6 students create advertising jingles for fictional products and all Grade 7 students create fictional promotion jingles (time-slot program, sports event, musical/dramatic production, concert, new CD collection, etc.). Remind students that these jingles must be based on plausible information and be respectful and appropriate for audiences of diverse backgrounds. The teacher creates a checklist with student input based on grade specific oral communication expectations to assess the jingles. Students may bring in any materials that might complement the sound effects they want included in their taped version.

During the next few days, provide opportunities for individual students to tape the jingles.

Using the teacher-/student-generated checklist, conference with students to discuss and set goals

Writing For RadioLanguage - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7*200 mins

highlighting areas for improvement. Encourage students to review and revise their work until their final product is completed. This final product is placed in the Unit Folder and will be summatively assessed at the end of the unit.

5.7 Persuasive Writing - Individual

Review with students the criteria for writing persuasive texts, focussing on specific grade-level expectations for writing. If this writing form has not been addressed this year in either grade, a teacher-directed lesson and opportunities to practise are necessary before assigning the follow-up activity. Use any available grade-appropriate text to show examples of persuasive writing to students. If persuasive writing has been taught this year, have students review their previous learnings.

Persuasive Writing

Remind students that persuasive writing is used to cause the reader to support a point of view or to act in support of a cause or idea. Persuasive writing often begins by outlining the topic or issue followed by a statement concerning the author's point of view or position. The body presents arguments and evidence in favour of the author's position. Arguments are supported by facts and figures. The conclusion may restate the author's position and sway the reader to act in support of the author's cause or idea. This information needs to be presented in a clear, organized, and effective manner. The teacher models how to write a persuasive piece of text using a graphic organizer to organize the various parts and then creating paragraphs to complete the text. Students need to be immersed in this form of writing and have opportunities to analyse many texts to fully understand this form of writing.

As a follow-up assignment, students write individual letters to persuade the board of directors of the radio station to grant them time to present their audition tape. Describe this individual writing assignment by connecting it to the information outlined in the above paragraph. Tell students that their letter must be written in business letter format. If business letter writing has not been addressed this year in either grade, a teacher-directed lesson and opportunities to practice will be necessary before assigning this follow-up activity. If this form of writing has been taught this year, have students review their previous learnings.

Business Letter Format

With a model of a business letter on an overhead or large chart paper, ask students to identify the features and format labelling each part as identified (salutation, body, closing, and signature). Using BLM 5.6 as an overhead, teach the criteria for a business letter format. Remind students formal language must be used throughout and their letters should be brief and concise. This type of letter is written from a first-person point of view, using pronouns such as "I" and "we." The first paragraph identifies the purpose of the letter (requesting radio producers to grant you time to present your audio tape). The second paragraph highlights why the audition tape would appeal to the producers. The final requests summarizes the request.

These letters are formatively assessed with a grade-specific persuasive business letter rubric. Share the Persuasive Letter Rubric (see Subtask 8) with grade-specific groups.

Conference with students to discuss and set goals highlighting areas for improvement. Encourage students to review and revise their work until their final product is completed. This final product is placed in the Unit Folder and summatively assessed at the end of the unit.

5.8 Journal - Individual

Remind students of their activities in Subtask 3 concerning the teachings of Jesus in the gospels. The Journal for this subtask should focus on the teachings of Jesus found in Matthew 23:1-5. Jesus taught us that we must be honest in all dealings. Each student should reflect on class discussions about advertising and decide if he/she thinks an advertiser would be able to create an advertisement that would sell a product without contravening these teachings of Jesus.

Writing For Radio

Language - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7

170 mins

Description

Students focus on communicating ideas and information for a variety of purposes and to specific audiences. They listen to a variety of news, weather, traffic, and sports reports on local radio stations and discuss significant information included in each of these types of reports. Students individually write fictional news, weather, traffic, or sports reports which are collected and assessed using a rating scale based on grade-specific expectations. Students practise their reports orally while they focus on the techniques needed to give effective oral reports. In their Journals, students focus on how radio is a media that provides opportunities for jobs for a wide variety of people.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 5e - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Respects the rights, responsibilities and contributions of self and others.

Expectations

- 6e49 A • communicate a main idea about a topic and describe a sequence of events;
- 6e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to inform, to persuade, to explain) and to specific audiences (e.g., write the instructions for building an electrical circuit for an audience unfamiliar with the technical terminology);
- 7e1 A • communicate ideas and information for a variety of purposes (to outline an argument, to report on observations) and to specific audiences, using forms appropriate for their purpose and topic (e.g., write a lab report for an audience familiar with the scientific terminology);
- 7e52 A • demonstrate the ability to concentrate by identifying main points and staying on topic;
- 6e57 A – use a varied vocabulary and a range of sentence structures to add interest to their remarks;
- 6e58 – speak correctly, observing common grammatical rules such as subject-verb agreement, noun-pronoun agreement, and consistency of verb tense;
- 6e60 – use tone of voice and gestures to enhance the message and help convince or persuade listeners in conversations, discussions, or presentations;
- 7e56 • use the conventions (e.g., sentence structure) of oral language, and of the various media, that are appropriate to the grade (see below).
- 7e57 – regularly incorporate new vocabulary into discussions and presentations;
- 7e62 – identify some of the ways in which non-verbal communication techniques (e.g., tone of voice and body language) can affect audiences, and use these techniques in their own speech to arouse and maintain interest, and convince and persuade their listeners;
- 6e14 A – use verb tenses consistently throughout a piece of writing;

- 6e17 A – use a variety of resources (e.g., computer spell check) to confirm spelling of common exceptions to spelling patterns;
- 7e17 A – spell a wide range of commonly used words correctly;
- 7e20 A – give evidence of an expanding vocabulary in their writing;

Teaching / Learning6.1 Analysis of Components of Newscasts - Whole Class

Explain to students that they are focussing on communicating ideas and information for a variety of purposes and to specific audiences during this subtask. Referring back to the information taught in Subtask 3, remind students of the content and components of radio reports. Provide students with the opportunity to listen again to a variety of news, weather, traffic, and sports reports on local radio stations and discuss significant factual information included in each of these types of reports. Together, identify possible audiences of the radio stations listened to at this time. Through discussion, draw students' attention to the techniques used to capture and hold audiences' attention, such as volume, pace, enunciation, pitch, tone and emphasis. Have students listen to more radio reports and complete a shared analysis by using an overhead of the checklist provided in BLM 8.1. Explain to students that this is the same checklist they will be using when they role-play as members of the the board of directors.

6.2 Shared Radio Report Writing - Whole Class

Following the lessons on analysing news, weather, sports, and traffic reports, remind students of the features of a radio report. Review the criteria of radio report writing and through a shared writing experience, model each specific type of radio report, e.g., news, weather, traffic, and sports reports. Display BLM 3.2 (completed by the class in Subtask 3) on an overhead during this process and while students are writing their own radio reports.

Report Writing

The information in each of these radio reports must be presented in an organized manner and use precise, descriptive language. Explain to students that they should use technical terminology related to the report, where appropriate. The report should be given in an objective style (based on facts, not on point of view) and in a formal tone. The introduction sets the focus for the report, main facts are often grouped by categories, and the conclusion summarizes the main points.

6.3 Individual Radio Reports - Individual Work/Small Groups

Each culminating task group selects the anticipated audience of the radio station to which the audition tape is being presented. Students individually write two fictional news reports from the list: weather, traffic, or sports reports. These reports must be concise, clear, and contain appropriate information. Remind students that these radio reports must be based on plausible information and be respectful and appropriate for audiences of diverse backgrounds. Share the radio report rubric for each grade level. Although each student should write two different types of radio reports, the culminating task group must ensure that their group will have a variety of each type of report from which to choose for the culminating activity. After individual students have written their reports, provide time for the culminating task groups to meet in order for members to share their reports and give constructive feedback. The teacher provides feedback at this time while moving from one culminating task group to another.

6.4 Audiotaped Newscasts - Individual/ Pairs/Small Groups

Provide students with ample opportunities to practise their presentations orally. These presentations are selected by the culminating task group to be included in the audition tape. Students work in pairs to present and elicit peer feedback by using the criteria learned throughout this unit. Remind students the feedback must reflect sensitivity to others and gospel values while allowing their partner to present information and ideas clearly and honestly. Circulate throughout the classroom to offer feedback and assist students to implement effective oral presentation techniques. This stage of formative assessment should be completed before the students revise their work. A teacher-generated checklist specific to expectations of each grade level would be most useful. Prior to taping, have culminating task group members listen to each others' reports, using BLM 8.1 as a guide for feedback.

Provide opportunities for students to tape, listen to, and revise the tape after checking for effective use of tone of voice, pace, volume, and enunciation. Each pair joins another "pair" who will listen and provide feedback. Encourage students to review and revise their work until their final product is completed. This final product is placed in the Unit Folder and summatively assessed at the end of the unit.

Writing For RadioLanguage - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7*170 mins

6.5 Journal - Individual

Engage students in a discussion on how radio is strictly auditory. Visual images are created through choices of words/expressions, voice, and background sounds. Visible appearances have no impact on performances on radio. Have a discussion on how this would provide opportunities for jobs for a wide variety of people.

Possible Reflection Questions

How does radio offer more job opportunities to a variety of people?

Does our society focus too much attention on physical appearance rather than individual gifts and talents?

When choosing friends or work partners in school, do I focus on physical appearance and style of clothing, rather than seeing the person God made?

Notes to Teacher

Teachers may choose to use either CBC or local radio stations. Local radio stations, however, may provide information that is more familiar to students.

Students may already be familiar with criteria for effective oral presentations from previous experiences giving speeches. Students may have been given the rubric Radio Report Writing during Subtask 2 when the Culminating Task Package is explained or it may be given at the beginning of this activity. Use this rubric to help students focus on expected criteria during their preparation and/or for formative assessment. Remind students this same rubric will be used at the end of the unit for summative assessment.

Writing For Radio

Description

Students work in combined-grade groups to plan to complete a program log and produce an audiotape for a radio audition. The teacher continues to keep anecdotal records used to assess oral communication and group skills. Peer feedback is used to assist students in revising and editing their work. Students complete a self-assessment of their contribution to group work.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

CGE 2c - Catholic Graduate Expectation - An Effective Communicator: Presents information and ideas clearly and honestly and with sensitivity to others.

CGE 5a - Catholic Graduate Expectation - A Collaborative Contributor: Works effectively as an interdependent team member.

Expectations

- 6e51 • contribute and work constructively in groups;
- 6e61 – use constructive strategies in small-group discussions (e.g., invite other group members to contribute; ask questions to clarify a point; negotiate to find a basis for agreement);
- 7e51 • contribute and work constructively in groups;
- 7e64 – listen and respond constructively to alternative ideas or viewpoints;
- 7e65 – express ideas and opinions confidently but without trying to dominate discussion;
- 6e50 • express and respond to a range of ideas and opinions concisely, clearly, and appropriately;

7.1 Preparation of Programme Log and Audition Tape - Culminating Task Small Group

Explain to students that they will have the opportunity to plan the production of the audiotape for their group's radio station audition. The group uses the content of each student's Unit Folder to select an interview, news, weather, sports, and traffic reports and a selection of advertising and promotional jingles. Refer to BLM 2.2 in the Culminating Task Package from Subtask 2 for a student outline of required components. In choosing from the contents of the various members' folders, they must ensure that each student is represented in the audition tape. Indicate your expectations for the length of their final audition tape (suggested length of 10-15 minutes). Tell students they must indicate on their group's programme log the exact number of minutes and seconds each component takes, the specific order of all items, and the name of the student who is recording each item. During this time, circulate throughout the room and continue to write anecdotal records to assess oral communication and group skills appropriate to each grade level. Allow time for groups to rehearse the oral part of their scripts. Provide feedback at this time and also encourage feedback by peers throughout this subtask to allow students opportunities to revise and edit their work with support.

Writing For RadioLanguage - Writing and Media A Unit for Grade 6/7*90 mins

7.2 Self-Assessment - Individual

Review criteria of BLM 7.1 on self-assessment of group skills. Students reflect back on their role in all group situations during this unit. Attention should be paid to their conflict-management skills in light of gospel teachings, with particular emphasis on the notion of the common good, and their contribution to a team in regards to their efforts towards consensus building and respect for others. Instruct students to place their completed BLM 7.1 in their Unit Folders.

Discuss with students how our Catholic Graduate Expectations leave us with the responsibility to fully develop and use our God-given gifts and talents. Ask students to reflect back on BLM 3.6, especially the sections on Relationships with Community and with Self, and reflect in their Journal on how these relate to the responses they wrote in their self-assessment.

7.3 Production of Audiotape - Combined Grade Groups

Over the next few days, provide students with a supervised quiet area to allow them to tape all of the items selected for their final audiotape. Ensure that each group is providing you with a means of identifying the speaker in each component of the final radio audition tape. This is needed to assess individual students' work, using grade-specific oral communication rubrics. The program log should be sufficient.

Possible Reflection Question

How did I exhibit Gospel Values within my relationship with others, as we chose individuals' contributions for our radio audition tape?

Description

Students work in combined-grade groups to present their audition tape to a fictitious radio station. The audition tape includes radio reports on news, weather, sports, and traffic, as well as an interview and advertising and promotional jingles.

While one group is presenting their audition tape, the rest of the students act as members of the board of directors of a radio station. Using information accumulated throughout the unit, they provide feedback to their peers and celebrate their successes.

Students complete their Journals by focussing on what they have learned about radio. They also describe how their increased awareness of the presence or absence of Catholic Gospel Values influences their choice of radio listening.

Each component of the Culminating Task is assessed on an individual basis according to grade-specific expectations. Each group's audition tape is also assessed using a teacher-generated rubric according to specific expectations for both Grade 6 and Grade 7 Oral and Visual Communication.

Catholic Graduate Expectations

8.1 Dual Role Participation - Whole Class/Individual

Explain the dual role students will fulfil. As presenters they are silent members since they have already fulfilled their role in the preparation of the audition tape. The rest of the students are role-playing as members of the board of directors of the radio station to which the application was made to hear the auditions. In this role they provide feedback by noting key features of each group's audiotape based on their learnings throughout the unit (BLM 8.1). Remind students that the feedback must be honest and reflect sensitivity to others as well as the Catholic Gospel Values of respecting others and their dignity, while allowing all students to experience success and acquire a positive self-image.

During the presentation, assess each student's contribution to the audition tape, using a teacher-created checklist specific to each grade expectation in Oral and Visual Communications.

8.2 Unit Folder - Individual

Give students time to organize the contents of their unit folders prior to handing them in. Assess all individual components of the unit folders, using the grade-specific assessment tools provided and created throughout the unit.

8.3 Journal - Individual

Together with students, revisit the KWL chart made at the beginning of the unit, and complete the last column with a description of what they have learned. Assign students an entry for their Journal for this subtask which should focus on what they have learned about radio. Students complete their Journals by describing how their increased awareness of the presence or absence of Catholic Gospel Values will influence their choice of radio listening.

Possible Reflection Topics

Grade 6 students:

1. Choose one type of professional involved in radio production and explain this person's role.
2. Describe how your increased awareness of the presence or absence of Catholic Gospel Values will influence your choice of radio listening.

Grade 7 students:

1. Choose one particular category of work typical of radio and explain what you have learned about it.

Radio

(Teacher Reference)

Section A: History Of Radio

- December 23, 1900, Canadian born Reginald Aubrey Fessenden tapped a microphone and uttered for the first time the words so often used since by radio announcers everywhere: " One, two, three, four...", from his laboratory on the Potomac River to a receiving station 80 km away
- that first broadcast of a human voice was made on modified Morse-code equipment
- one year later, in December of 1901, Italian-born Guglielmo Marconi sent a transmission from England to Signal Hill, Newfoundland which was solely in Morse code
- April 14 and 15, 1912, while the Titanic was sinking, Marconi's Morse signals provided the only information available
- 1919, Montreal radio station, XWA (later CFCF) started to broadcast
- Pittsburgh, Nov. 1920, KDKA, the first commercial broadcasting station, went on the air
- early 1920's, first commercially licensed radio stations in Canada provided regularly scheduled programmes
- Canada's first national broadcast, on July 1, 1927, celebrated Canada's Diamond Jubilee and originated from Parliament Hill in Ottawa, linking twenty-three stations from coast to coast
- due to concern about the trend of Canadian stations affiliating with American networks because of their slickly produced entertainment, Prime Minister Mackenzie King appointed Sir John Aird to study broadcasting in Canada
- Aird's report proposed the creation of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Company (CRBC), which was created in 1933 and was renamed the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) in 1936
- the CBC was devoted to preserving Canadian identity and to providing uniquely Canadian programming, a mandate that it continues to exercise to this day
- in the 1930's radio broadcaster Foster Hewitt coined the phrase "He shoots, he scores!"
- radio created a Saturday-night tradition at the very centre of the Canadian identity
- radio's "golden age " lasted approximately 25 years; from the mid-1920's to the early 1950's, during this time radio was the mass medium
- radio provided every conceivable genre: crime, adventure, soap operas, game and quiz shows, horror, thrillers, variety, comedies, public affairs, westerns, dramas, talk shows as well as music, news and sports

Radio

(Teacher Reference)

- during the golden age, prime time for radio was the same as it is for television today, the evening hours between dinner and bedtime, but in response to the popularity of television, radio's prime time has now shifted to the period from 6:00 to 9:00 a.m.
- in the late 1940's and early 1950's commercial radio abandoned the format of the broadly appealing entertainment programme in favour of a format that presented music targeted towards specific groups of people
- after the Second World War, the FM band featured superior sound production and used a format primarily of classical music
- by the late 1960's a number of FM stations switched to a rock-music format
- radio's lower costs, especially in production and audience delivery, have provided it with a certain amount of insulation from economic "realities" that exist in the television industry
- radio's simple technology, somewhat consistent market, and low costs give radio a greater degree of flexibility to respond to changing demographics
- small-town radio stations can operate for a year on what it costs to produce a single half-hour situation comedy on prime-time television

Section A: Taken from: Media Literacy, Intermediate and Senior Divisions, 1989, Ministry of Education Ontario

Section B - Uses of Radio Waves

- the prime purpose of radio is to convey information from one place to another through the intervening media (i.e.: air, space, non-conducting material) without wires
- radio waves are used for: sound and television signals, transmission of data in coded form, radar, communication between astronauts on the moon and earth, carrying information from space probes, ship and aircraft navigation, and global positioning satellites
- cellular and cordless phones are actually radio receivers and telephone calls are routinely relayed by radio

Transmission and Reception of Radio Waves

- a radio wave sends information between a transmitter and a receiver
- AM (amplitude modulation) and FM (frequency modulation) are the two most commonly used types of modulation
- waves radiate at the speed of light (about 300,000 km/sec) and are transmitted by line of sight and deflection from the ionosphere

Student Outline for Culminating Task

You are applying for a job as a radio announcer with a fictitious radio station. You are required to prepare and send the station an audition tape which includes news, weather, traffic, and sports reports, as well as an interview and advertising and promotional jingles.

This unit focusses on writing and oral communication expectations. You will be listening to and analysing radio programming. Today you are receiving the Culminating Task Package which you will use to prepare for the final demonstration of what you will have learned.

You will work in small groups to plan and write radio reports and produce an audiotaped radio audition. Throughout the unit, you will be taught the skills necessary to complete this report and have opportunities to practise new skills. You will be assessed individually on appropriate grade level expectations for writing and oral communication. You will have opportunities for peer feedback throughout the unit and you will also complete a self-assessment of your performance in group activities at the completion of the unit. You will also be completing various Listening Habit Surveys in order to explore the use of radio as part of our present day mass communication system.

You will need to consistently review the content of your Unit Folder to ensure the preliminary work for the culminating task is completed as required.

The following are some of the concepts and skills you will be working on:

- how to critically analyse radio programming
- how to complete a radio report writing assignment
- how to prepare and carry out an interview
- how to complete a persuasive writing assignment
- how to identify questionable strategies and exaggerated claims used in advertising to influence an audience
- how to create and tape an advertising/promotional jingle
- how to prepare, write, and present news, weather, traffic, and sports reports for radio
- how to work with a group to organize, create, and tape a radio programme

In Subtask 8 you will have a dual role. You will present your audition tape. While other groups are presenting their tape, you will act as a member of the board of directors of the radio station providing feedback to your peers based on the learning that you have done throughout the unit and celebrating their successes.

Good Luck and Enjoy!

Sample Letter to Parents

Dear Parent/Guardian,

Our next unit in Language focusses on Media Through Radio. Students will explore the use of radio as a popular system of communication. Students will learn the historical significance of radio in mass communication. They will explore their present day experience with radio in order to develop critical understanding of this form of media. There will be an emphasis on making informed choices that reflect Catholic values about what they hear on the radio.

Today we are sending home the Culminating Task Package, which contains everything needed to prepare for the final demonstration of what has been learned during this unit. This culminating task will involve students working in small groups to plan and produce an audition tape for a fictitious radio station. Throughout the unit, the students will be taught the skills necessary to complete this task and have opportunities to practise new skills. They will be assessed individually on appropriate grade level expectations for writing and oral communication. Your child will also be completing various Listening Habit Surveys to explore the use of radio as part of our present day mass communication system.

You may wish to periodically review the content of your child's Unit Folder to share the work as we progress through this unit.

If you have any expertise that you would like to share or items which you feel would contribute to our learning during this unit, we would welcome them! Please contact me at school to discuss what you may have to share.

Sincerely,

Roles of Radio Professionals

Advertising Copywriters write advertisements for organizations or companies. These ads may appear in newspapers, magazines, on radio or television. Not only do these ads persuade us to buy products, they also promote positive images for companies.

When a company decides it wants to create an ad for its product, the copywriter meets with employees from the company to discuss the product and decide what message they want the ad to give. In radio, copywriters prepare commercial scripts and short announcements for companies that buy advertising time.

Radio Announcers select and introduce recorded music, interview guests and present news, sports, weather and commercials. They also report on community activities and other matters of interest to their audience. Although they often “ad-lib” commentary, in-depth research and script writing may be an integral part of their job.

Announcers at large stations usually specialize in one area such as news, sports, or weather. In small stations, one announcer may do everything from operating the control board to setting up schedules, selling commercial time to advertisers, and writing commercial and news copy as well as announcing.

Broadcast News Analysts, called Commentators, present news stories, provide analysis of stories and discuss how the stories might affect people and countries. Talk show hosts interview guests about their lives, work, or topics of current interest.

Disc Jockeys (DJs) are creative and in tune with the kind of music their audiences want to hear. They chat in between tracks and hold live conversations with guest celebrities or callers. To move fluidly from one task to another, DJs require the technical skills necessary to operate the equipment. DJs often have specialized knowledge about a particular type of music and work at building a loyal audience.

Broadcast Technicians, also known as Operators or Engineers, are the nerve centres of television stations, radio stations, and film production companies. In general, they design, set up, operate and maintain equipment used for broadcasting.

Many professionals are grouped under the heading Broadcast Technician. Further specific titles and jobs are:

- Transmitter Operators who monitor and log outgoing signals and run transmitters.
- Maintenance Technicians who set up, operate and maintain electronic broadcasting equipment.
- Audio Control Engineers who monitor and regulate sound.
- Recording Engineers who operate and maintain sound recording equipment.

Roles of Radio Professionals

Radio Producers are hard-working, creative people who co-ordinate both the content side and the technical side of radio broadcasts. They also supervise many of the people who work in radio. Producers have to be sensitive to their audiences to know what they want to hear. They must also have a good knowledge of the costs required to make things happen. Producers see the “big picture” and know that each person’s job is valuable in making this “big picture” happen.

Radio Reporters must be both sincere and professional at all times. The stories they prepare must present important and accurate information in a limited amount of time. Although they may spend all day preparing, writing, and interviewing for their piece, most reporters have less than two minutes to present their material on-air. They don’t have time to include the same amount of detail as a Print Journalist, so they must use a combination of a good script, interviews, and sound effects to tell the story. Reporters set up as many interviews as they can over the telephone and then set off to cover the story. Radio Reporters may travel alone, carrying sound recording equipment for themselves.

A Recording Engineer operates a sophisticated piece of technical equipment called a mixing board. Recording Engineers record, mix, and edit sound effects, using this mixing board. These recordings are used in commercials, radio jingles, films, and music albums. Recording Engineers must keep up with technical developments in their field in order to stay current. The current trend is away from mixing boards to smaller, more sophisticated, software-driven computers.

Sound Technicians ensure that audiences receive the best quality audio possible. They have a high degree of technical knowledge. Sound Technicians who work for radio stations often “mike” people (put microphones on and monitor sound) during interviews, both live and recorded. They determine sound quality and inform the news producers of any problems.

Analysis of Advertising Techniques (Grade 7)

Advertisements are at the heart of our consumer society. We hear and/or see advertisements in newspapers, magazines, television, and radio, etc. They often distort reality to persuade us to buy products. They make false promises, appealing to our need to be liked or our desire to be beautiful, successful, happy, or perfect. It is important for us as consumers to look critically at the messages that advertising is giving us. This assignment looks at these messages in print and radio ads.
